Tax Bill Sped By 'Tentative' Approval of Business Aid

2 Readings Held By House Group

(Partial Text, Page 2.)

By Robert C. Albright.

A 334-page confidential print of the 1938 revenue bill was laid before the first full meeting of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday in an effort to complete action and rush the measure to the House floor late next week.

Providing business tax relief in the form of modifications of the undivided profits tax and further easing of the levy on capital gains—chief targets of business criticism—the bill probably will be approved without major change by the committee.

At morning and afternoon sessions, the first 180 pages of the complex draft were read and explained by Middleton Beaman and John O'Brien, of House legislative counsel.

'Tentative Approval' Seen.

Representative Fred Vinson, (Democrat), of Kentucky, tax subcommittee chairman, said the reading, without further amendment, of the undivided profits and capital gains sections was equivalent to "tentative approval" of those features of the bill.

But Republican motions to completely repeal the undivided profits tax and to cut the capital gains levy far below present levels, are expected to be offered before the final committee vote. Republicans control only 7 votes on the 25-man committee, and their motions will be overriden.

Close Vote Expected.

The closest vote is expected to come on proposed penalty taxation of large-income family and "closely held" companies controlled by from one to ten persons. This section of the bill was not reached yesterday.

Opposition to the penalty had held Democratic members in controversy for weeks until concessions proposed by Vinson Thursday finally broke the deadlock. Amendments, one of which exempts from the tax companies earning up to $75,000, will be offered to the so-called "1B" section of the bill by Vinson. The tax sub-committee chairman predicted that not only the penalty section, as modified, but all key pro-

Red Tape Delays Roosevelt Radio To 'Flying Forts'

President Roosevelt, the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, was balked by an obscure War Department clerk yesterday when he attempted to radio congratulations to the Army flyers at Buenos Aires.

The regulation-conscious clerk, given the message for transmission, refused to pass it until it had been approved by the Adjutant-General.

Army authorities were at first annoyed, then provoked and finally amused. Nevertheless, they got the Adjutant-General's authorization as required.

Illinois Congressman's Wife Loses Jewelry and Cash; Ladder Thief Enters Bedroom While Family Is Eating Dinner.

More than $5,000 in jewelry was stolen last night from the home of Representative Scott Lucas, of Illinois, while the family sat at dinner downstairs.

The thief used a ladder to climb to a second-story porch of the dwelling at 4500 Broad Branch road.

Included in the loot were four diamond rings, among them Mrs. Lucas' $2,000 engagement ring and her $800, gem-studded wedding ring. The thief also got some antique rings and Mrs. Lucas' pocketbook containing $40.

Lucas was out of the city on business. At the time the robbery occurred, Mrs. Lucas and her 6-year-old son, Scott Lucas, jr., were entertaining her mother, Mrs. Belle Biggs, and an aunt.

Detective Sergt. Paul Ambrose and Joe Caw, fingerprint expert, were assigned to the case.

They found the ladder covered with leaves about 200 yards from the house. Several similar burglaries have occurred in the fashionable Broad Branch section during the past year.

Rear Adm. Land Named to Head Maritime Body

Kennedy, Resigning, Warns of Labor Problem and Shipbuilding Cost.

By Edward T. Folliard

President Roosevelt last night named Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. N., retired, as chairman of the Maritime Commission to succeed Joseph P. Kennedy.

At the same time he announced that he would nominate Max O. Truitt, now general counsel of the commission, to be a member of the commission.

The swiftness with which President Roosevelt moved indicated his concern over the American merchant marine. Earlier in the day, at a White House ceremony, Kennedy resigned as chairman of the Maritime Commission and took the oath as Ambassador to Great Britain. A few hours later, the President started for Hyde Park. En route he called in newspaper reporters and announced his choice of Admiral Land as chairman and his intention to nominate Truitt as a commission member.

Kennedy Stresses Problems.

Kennedy, in relinquishing his maritime post, told President Roosevelt that there were two vital problems that had to be solved before the United States "can hope to get anywhere at sea."

One, he said, was the "disturbing"

Roosevelt Lets RFC Resume Its Business Loans

32 Regional Offices Start Taking Applications Immediately.

Resumption of Reconstruction Finance Corporation lending, especially to maintain or increase employment, was authorized by President Roosevelt yesterday in an apparent move to provide capital to worthy enterprises unable to obtain funds through regular banking channels.

RFC Chairman Jesse Jones immediately announced he had instructed the agency's 32 regional offices to accept applications for loans that qualify under the RFC act. He said the RFC had approximately $1,500,000,000 available for loans but that he did not expect more than $200,000,000 or $300,000,00 of this sum would be used.

The RFC, in operating under the President's instructions yesterday, will be governed by the same law and regulations as prior to last October 18, when it suspended the acceptance of loan applications in an effort to make a contribution toward balancing the budget.

The President's instructions, contained in a letter to Jones, apparently were inspired by demands for industrial loans for small business enterprises. The resumption of RFC lending authority, however, was made general. It will apply to railroads and banks, as well as

6 U. S. 'Air Forts' Span Andes And Illumine Foreign Policy

Flight to Buenos Aires Is Likened to Fleet's Trip Around World.

By Sidney Olson.

Another facet of the foreign policy of the United States was turned to public scrutiny yesterday, in the opinion of observers here, when the 5,200-mile flight of the Army's six flying fortresses ended successfully in Buenos Aires.

While Congressmen have almost daily clamored for information on the direction and intent of the Administration's policy in foreign affairs, the Administration has contente itself with two dramatic demonstrations of that policy—the visit of American battleships to the opening of the huge British Singapore Naval Base and the spectacular day-and-a-half trip of six of the Bombers Covered 5,200 Miles in 34 Hours, a Record.

By the Associated Press.

Buenos Aires, Feb. 18.—Six United States Air Corps bombers today hurdled the lofty, snow-capped Andes and landed here for a warmly welcomed good-will call at the end of a record-breaking 5,200-mile flight from Miami, Fla.

Thousands cheered from rooftops, streets and El Palomar airbase as five of the "flying fortresses" arrived from Lima, Peru, the one stop of the squadron en route from Miami, in the heat of mid-day.

But it remained for the bomber commanded by Maj. J. V. Meloy, which had been delayed in Lima because of propeller trouble, to join its mates with a new record tacked to its tail.

Five Bandits Given Terms Of 173 Years

On the Crime Front.

Five colored gunmen, blamed for more than 40 holdups in the District, were sentenced to a minimum total of 173 years' imprisonment.

Robert F. Langdon, former District policeman, pleaded not guilty to the seven-year-old murder of Beulah Limerick. Page 3.

5 Get 173 Years.

Pronouncing the most severe sentences of their kind in the history of the courts here, Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue yesterday decreed that five members of a gang of colored grocery and liquor store robbers must serve collective terms of at least 173 years in jail. Maximum sentence of the hoodlums totaled 259 years.

"These are the most outrageous cases of defiance of the law ever known in the District of Columbia," commented the white-haired justice as he passed sentence.

Harry M. Towson, 20, colored, drew the heaviest term, of not less than 63 years and not more than 84 years in jail on 19 robbery charges and two charges of assault with intent to kill.

Others Severely Sentenced.

Solomon McNair, 25, colored, who pleaded guilty to 17 charges of robbery, got from 51 to 68 years.

Andrew Savage, 25, colored, got from 9 to 36 years on two robbery charges and one charge of assault with intent to kill.

Samuel T. Brady, colored, received a similar sentence.

William McKinney, colored, fifth member of the gang, was given a sentence of from 21 to 35 years.

"Considering the number of cases and the number of men involved," said Allen Krouse, assistant United States attorney in charge of prosecution, "this was disposed of about as quickly as any in the history of the District. The sentences were the stiffest I've known in my 10 years in office.

"The police officers who apprehended these men deserve a lot of credit. I believe most of our crime is due to outsiders who come here, make raids and run home. This case will help to show them Washington is an uncomfortable place to operate."

Taken in Gun Battle.

Breakdown of the gang was precipitated when Detective Sergts. R. J. Barrett and D. I. Guest engaged in a gun battle with five colored men near the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md., January 4. Two of the men were captured and as a result of their disclosures seven were indicted. Two of the gang are now serving 40 years each in Baltimore, and a seventh is a fugitive. One was not indicted here.

U. S. Asked to Aid Hunt for Missing Hyattsville Girl

The name of Lois Eleanor Simms, pretty 15-year-old Hyattsville, Md., high school student who disappeared Monday afternoon, yesterday went onto the Federal Bureau of Investigation's list of missing persons.

O. L. Simms and Ruth Simms, of Riverdale, Md., father and sister of the missing girl, had appealed earlier in the day for aid from the F. B. I.

Meanwhile, Prince Georges County police sought a Hyattsville high school boy who has been seen frequently in Lois' company.

Questioned yesterday morning and then released, the youth will be rearrested for investigation, police said. He is believed by police to have withheld vital information.

Inflationary Plan Denied By Roosevelt

Says Moderate Rise in the Present Level Is Desirable.

(Text of Statement, Page 7.)

By Franklyn Waltman.

Denying he contemplated any further devaluation of the dollar or resort to similar inflationary moves, President Roosevelt yesterday declared that Government policy would be directed to reversing the present deflationary trend and to bringing about a better relationship between commodity prices so necessary for a sustained recovery.

"It is clear that in the present situation," Mr. Roosevelt said, "a moderate rise in the present price level is desirable and that this rise need not and should not extend to all prices."

Elaborating on the Administration's price policies in great detail, the President asserted that some prices and some costs were too high even now to promote the balanced relationship he had in mind. Classes of commodities where price rises were essential were said by the President to be mostly raw materials and finished products "which are produced and sold under highly competitive conditions."

Higher Income Is Goal.

"Our program," he asserted reading from a statement prepared for him, "seeks a balanced system of prices such as will promote a balanced expansion in production. Our goal is a constantly increasing national income through increasing production and employment. This is the way to increase the real income of consumers.

"This is not a policy of restriction; it is a policy of abundance. Our agricultural, industrial, housing and monetary programs have been and will be directed toward this end."

Mr. Roosevelt did not specify any particular step which he had in mind. He avoided specifically answering whether he believed labor costs were too high, asserting that the answer to lower costs of production was to be found in increased volume rather than in lower wages.

Wants Stable Jobs.

But he reiterated his previous assertion that he was more interested in an annual income for workers rather than high hourly wage rates and said he favored all efforts to bring about a stabilization of employment that would assure workers continuous employment.

Mr. Roosevelt expounded the Administration's attitude toward the present price situation at his semi-weekly press conference yesterday. He began by reading a statement prepared for him by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Marinner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve system, and a group of the economic advisers in the various Government departments and agencies.

In this statement he outlined the underlying principles of the Administration in regard to prices and the objectives which should be sought.

Hottest 1938 Day Hits 71; Mercury To Tumble Today

As the temperature mounted to 71 degrees at 2 p. m. yesterday, Washington experienced its hottest day of 1938 and the second hottest February 18 in 69-year-old records of the Weather Bureau.

The forecast for today is rain and colder, with more rain tomorrow.

Washington was a perfect winter resort yesterday with temperatures lower than New York's 50, Philadelphia's 62. Miami with 76 degrees was warmer, as was New Orleans with 72. The sunny Southwest, however, was colder with 54 reported at 2 p. m. for Phoenix, Ariz., and Los Angeles.

The previous high temperature this year for Washington was 69 degrees on February 6. Only once has the temperature been higher on February 18, in 1890, when it reached 72 degrees.

Temperatures yesterday were:

Hitler to End Religious Persecution; Paris Asks Britain's Aid in Austria

London Calls on Duce to Show Where Italy Will Stand.

Berlin's Enemies Counter in Vienna

Monarchists Offer to Join With Socialists Against Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 18.—France urged Great Britain today to join her in a strong joint effort to safeguard the vital interests of the two democracies against Germany's strides through Austria toward a Nazified central Europe.

At the same time, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain tested Italy's apparent acquiescence in Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's coup by asking flatly whether Premier Mussolini wanted friendship with Great Britain.

In Vienna the tide of opposition toward the Hitlerization of Austria was rising. Monarchists sought to join with Socialists to fight the inroads Hitler and his Austrian Nazi followers were making in the government of an "autonomous and independent Austria."

Schuschnigg Assailed.

Members of the Fatherland Front, Austria's only legal political party, cried out openly against Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's statements of his submission to Hitler's demands.

At the end of a day of fast moving diplomatic developments in London, Chamberlain took the unusual step of calling an extraordinary cabinet council on foreign affairs to meet Saturday and consider the whole European situation.

Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden already had conferred with Italian Ambassador Dino Grandi when France presented her strong representations for "maximum help" for Austria to resist further Nazi encroachment on Austrian independence.

Diplomatic circles heard reports that Italy had agreed to Germany's influence in Austria in return for a military alliance with Germany. The purge of ranking German army leaders was believed to have paved the way for such a treaty.

French Arms Speeded Up.

France made her representations to Britain as the national defense council in Paris unanimously approved a new $329,000,000 armament plan and decided to accelerate the output of munitions and armaments.

France's demand was presented personally to Eden by Ambassador Charles Corbin after the foreign secretary and Chamberlain held two long conferences with the Italian ambassador. Grandi then talked at length with Rome by telephone.

Diplomatic quarters said France felt strongly Austria should be helped to defend what was left of her independence and urged closer contact on a situation described as of grave concern to all Europe.

These quarters denied Anglo-French general staff talks were contemplated, though the possibility was not ruled out.

The Paris defense council's request that the new arms appropriations be given urgent consideration in Parliament coincided with reports in diplomatic circles that the French ambassadors to England, Germany and Austria had been summoned home for a conference on the Austrian situation.

Under the new French defense plan the navy would lay down two 35,000-ton battleships immediately and the airforce would order 1,000 new fighting planes.

Tells Nazi Dream Of Commonwealth

FRANZ VON PAPEN.

Hitler to Enlist More Nations, Says Von Papen

Declares Austria First in a Proposed Commonwealth of Neighbor Lands.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 18.—Franz von Papen, retiring Nazi ambassador to Austria, who engineered the far-reaching Austro-German accord, said today it was but the first step toward a "commonwealth of nations in middle Europe" under Germany's leadership.

He declared that other similar agreements were expected to follow, especially with the "succession states" carved out of the old Austro-Hungarian empire at the end of the World War.

(Austria and Hungary are the principal succession states. Czechoslovakia, Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia all received territories of the former empire.)

Von Papen disclosed that the important part of the agreement was economic and that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler would guarantee Austria's independence in his Reichstag speech Sunday.

Duplicate Trade Efforts.

In general, he said, Hitler's economic measures in Germany would be duplicated in Austria, tariff preferences would be granted Austria and tourist centers would be increased.

The interview with Von Papen was the first statement made by anyone who actually was present at the now-historic conference last Saturday between Hitler and Aus-

Criminal Justice Group Raises Third of $35,000 Drive Fund

Continuing its drive to raise funds for an organized fight against local crime conditions, the Washington Criminal Justice Association, through Clarence Phelps Dodge, chairman of the membership committee, announced yesterday that more than one-third of itse goal had been reached.

At a joint meeting of the special gifts committee and captains of ten volunteer solicitation teams, it was reported that $14,298.50 has already been subscribed. The necessary operating budget is $35,000.

More than 100 volunteer solicitors are working on the general fund drive, Dodge said.

At the same time yesterday, Attorney General Homer Cummings, in a leiter to Dr. James Allen Nolan, managing director of the criminal justice group, lauded the association's efforts and called for public support.

"I think that you and your associates are taking up a task of the highest importance to the well-being of the District of Columbia," said the Attorney General. "You are approaching the crime problem with firmness and intelligence. Your program warrants the earnest support of the well-disposed people of this community."

Makes Concession to Insure Safety of Nazis in Austria.

Consents to Defer Vienna Plebiscite

Fuehrer to Announce New Policy Sunday in Reichstag.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 18.—Nazis, who last night triumphantly envisaged the complete, immediate Nazification of Austria, had to curb their optimism somewhat tonight when secrecy was lifted from some concessions Reichsfuehrer Hitler has had to make.

The concessions were in the realms of religion, "weltanschauung"—"world outlook"—and acquiescence to Austrian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg's refusal to allow a plebiscite in Austria at this time.

Germans, both Catholic and Protestant, as well as Austrians were beneficiaries.

Will Free Prisoners.

A source close to the German chancellery said Hitler would declare an amnesty Sunday in his heralded speech to the Reichstag for political offenders against the Third Reich that would free prisoners of both persuasions.

This source, hitherto always reliable, divulged that the Fuehrer would state definitely Sunday that Nazism is a political—not a religious—movement.

Now, it is expected, the still-pending trials of Catholic priests and nuns will be quashed almost without exception.

Evidence was present also that the pressure had been lifted from the Evangelical church. Permission to reopen was given various offices closed months ago by the secret police.

The concessions were expected to be a blow to many thousands of Hitler's followers who have been proclaiming the idea that Nazism is a new religion of German blood and German soil.

They also took some of the edge off of Pro-Nazi Arthur von Seyss-Inquart's inclusion in the reshaped Austrian cabinet as minister of the interior. German Nazis had expected his office to be instrumental in swift Nazification of Austria.

Coincidentally, the trial of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of Protestant opposition to Nazi religious doctrine, on charges of treasonable activity, opened a day ahead of schedule and the prosecution re-

Broken by Prison, Chief of '34 Putsch By Nazis Is Freed

Vienna, Feb. 18 (AP).—Broken in health, Dr. Anton Rintelen, 67, former cabinet member and Austrian Minister to Italy, sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the anti-Dollfuss Nazi putsch, was released today under Austria's new amnesty for political prisoners.

Age and prolonged illness bore heavily upon the former diplomat, who emerged white-haired and with sunken face, in contrast to the robust appearance he presented four years ago.

Dr. Rintelen was believed slated for the chancellorship if the putsch against Chancellor Englebert Dollfuss succeeded. It was Dr. Rintelen who was announced over a captured government radio station as "the new chancellor" at almost the same time Dollfuss was assassinated in the chancellery on the afternoon of July 25, 1934.

Naval Hearing Is 'Warned' by Four Citizens

'Crusade' Assailed; Inventor Fears Fleet's Destruction by New Mine.

The House Naval Affairs Committee, tapering off hearings before they report favorably next week the bill authorizing a 20 per cent increase in the United States fleet, yesterday heard four more "warnings" from a professor, an inventor, a radio commentator and an advertising man.

The professor, Dr. Thomas H. Healey, of Georgetown University, warned the committee against "another futile crusade" for world peace, and advised against making "Asia safe for Great Britain."

The inventor, Lester P. Barlow, of Stamford, Conn., warned that the whole new naval program may be outmoded by a new development—a mysterious "aerial mine" that can be dropped by bombers from tremendous heights and capable of blanketing areas 10 miles square in less than five minutes.

Carter Dislikes "Rainbows."

The radio commentator, short, sandy-haired Boake Carter, warned against "chasing rainbows in the Orient," although saying he was neither for nor against the present bill.

The advertising man, F. E. Turin, of Norfolk, Va., chairman of the Adequate Coast Defense Association, warned that the Panama Canal "is vulnerable," and urged building of sufficient battleships to provide a separate fleet for both coastlines.

The House Appropriations subcommittee, handling War Department appropriations, completed its hearings, meanwhile, and prepared to report a measure calling for about a half-billion dollars to strengthen the Army.

War-Profits Bill Delayed.

The House Military Affairs Committee balked repeatedly from reporting the Sheppard-May war-profits bill by dissension over its omission of detailed tax provisions, held another fruitless session yesterday and finally postponed action until Thursday.

The committee did restore a provision for universal compulsory conscription of men 21 to 31, in the event of war.

The Naval Affairs Committee will close hearings Tuesday, when Admiral W. G. DuBose, chief of the construction bureau, and Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief of the aeronautics bureau, will testify in favor of the billion-dollar-plus naval expansion program.

DuBose and Cook are expected to tell the committee the final cost of the expansion. Originally figured at $800,000,000, later estimates have shot the total to $1,050,000,000, without figuring in the cost of building 1,000 airplanes.

Barlow, an inventor of aerial bombs and said to be the first man to use them in the World War, urged the committee yesterday to spend more for bombing planes and less for battleships.

"For the price of one battleship the United States can purchase 1,200 bombers capable of devastating vast areas in a few minutes," he said.

British Attitude Attacked.

He said there is "no logical reason" for building more battleships unless the United States is "going to fight beyond the limits of this hemisphere." He recalled that Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, had testified battleships are practically ineffective without their auxiliaries, and added that possession by this country of a super air force would render outside attack impossible, "as we could annihilate practically all their auxiliaries, not so much by sinking them as by putting them out of action."

Dr. Healey, asserting that "on the basis of what is now known" the expansion program is "unjustified," also criticised the Washington Navy Treaty, saying:

"We foolishly destroyed $300,000,000 worth of ships to please Great Britain which now wants us to build twice as much because she thinks she will need them to protect her interests."

Benjamin C. Marsh, secretary, The People's Lobby, told the committee that the British Government believes the Navy bill is "part of Britain's rearmament program, but it is doubtful whether Americans want to save Britain before they save themselves."

Castle Reported Facing Trial for Deserting Franco

Gibraltar, Feb. 18 (AP).—Official insurgent sources in Algeciras said tonight that Guy Wilkinson Stuart Castle, 22-year-old Oxon Hill, Maryland, volunteer, had been taken from La Linea, Spain, to Seville to face court-martial on a charge of attempted desertion.

The youth arrived at La Linea from Seville yesterday and no reason was given for his return. It was understood he was badly injured in both legs.

His mother, Mrs. Harriet Bayne Castle of Oxon Hill, already had interviewed insurgent authorities in Seville in an effort to gain her son's custody.

Politics and People

Ruling Out of Further Monetary Tinkering Held Highlight of Roosevelt Price Talk.

By Franklyn Waltman

President Roosevelt's exposition of the Administration's price policies yesterday constituted one of the most reassuring and confidence-breeding events which has occurred around Washington in recent weeks. Furthermore, it was a fine illustration of the manner in which the White House press conference, a target for some criticism in recent weeks, can be used to clarify for the country an important Administration policy.

WALTMAN.

But, first, as to the reassuring note of the President's remarks. There flowed from his discussion of the current price situation a conclusive implication that the Administration has abandoned the idea of using instruments of monetary and credit control in a general attack to force prices upward.

Mr. Roosevelt said as much when he denied any consideration was being given to further devaluation of the dollar and that the price policy he had outlined was inflationary. In answering the latter question, raised by him, the President added that one could not speak of inflation and balanced prices as going together.

This latter remark was perhaps the most significant thing Mr. Roosevelt said during his press conference, since it pointed up all that he said. In simple words, it meant that the President has traveled a long way from the ideas he entertained in 1933 and 1934 when Prof. George F. Warren, the hen-laying expert, was the fair-haired boy at the White House.

Wall Street speculators, their eyes on the White House conference, got the point as soon as it was made. The explanation for the break in security prices on the heels of the President's remarks was that Wall Street was unprepared for Mr. Roosevelt's revelation that he was through with monetary tinkering. The foreign exchange speculators also got the point.

Even had Mr. Roosevelt failed specifically to deny he had any further monetary experiments in mind, his remarks about prices could have been interpreted to the same end. He made the point, perhaps for the first time clearly, that he was more concerned about promoting "balanced relationship between prices" than in just boosting the price level. He distinguished between prices already too high and prices regarded as too low.

Such a distinction was not made in 1933 when the New Deal launched its monetary experiments. Then prices were regarded as a unit, reflected by the composite average index figure of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the object was to make that unit move upward by manipulating money and credit. The result was that all prices moved upward in approximate proportion, except that farm prices, due to the droughts and the scarcity program, moved a little faster, and the maladjustment of prices which developed during the depression remained.

Were the President to attack the present price situation in the same manner as he did the 1933 price situation he would again be perpetuating a maladjustment of prices and encouraging speculation rather than stability. He realizes now that a frontal attack cannot be made on the price situation through monetary and credit manipulation, but that various types of prices must be treated in different ways.

Thus he proposes to raise farm prices by his newly-approved agricultural bill. He proposes to lower the high prices for building material through encouraging large-scale housing under the recently enacted amendments to the Federal Housing Administration law. He proposes to deal with controlled or rigid prices through measures designed to break up monopolistic practices.

Mr. Roosevelt's faith in the efficacy of all these measures to achieve the end he has in mind may not be fulfilled. But his approach to the problem is more realistic than that pursued by this Administration earlier in its life, just as is the wet towel which Mr. Roosevelt put on talk about the desirability of restoring the 1926 price level.

As he pointed out, even if the 1926 price level were admirable for its day, changes have taken place in the debt burden so that a balanced relationship between the debt load and prices can be achieved without going fully back to the 1926 figures.

Another element in the situation is the improvement made in recent years in the value and efficiency of certain manufactured products. There can be no doubt that for the same price a far better automobile can be purchased today than in 1926. Yet the cold statistical index would show that price immovable.

But the purchaser is getting far more for his money. Much has been said about the price of structural steel, but there again an improved product is being sold. Despite the high prices for some building materials and increased labor costs, $5,000 today will buy a better house than it would in 1926. These are factors in the price situation which charts and graphs of index figures do not reveal.

Now just a word as to the White House press conferences. In recent weeks the oral question and answer procedure has been criticized in some quarters because the President, by ill-considered or incomplete answers to several important questions created confusion as to his policies. On the theory that these conferences are for the purpose of disseminating information and not for creating confusion, one commentator suggested a return to the old written question technique of previous Administrations.

Few of the Washington corps of correspondents want the oral question procedure abandoned. This writer, for one, favors its maintenance on the ground that it is not the function of the press to nurse the President, but to let the country know if he answers questions in a way to create confusion. But for the sake of argument let it be assumed that these conferences could be improved.

If that is conceded, I think the President has improved them by his recently adopted technique of preparing a statement on some matter of importance, and even directing questions to himself, leaving those who attend the privilege of orally supplementing his questions. Anything that contributes information as to what is going on in Mr. Roosevelt's mind is desirable—and his press conference yesterday did that.

Roosevelt Signs Bill to Require Auto Inspection

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said he would start immediate plans to provide the necessary equipment and personnel. It will be several months, however, before the plan can be placed in operation, he said.

Inspection stations, according to tentative plans, will be installed on upper Wisconsin avenue, Bladensburg road and somewhere in the downtown area.

George F. Getz Leaves $700,000 Estate to Sons

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP).—The will of George F. Getz, estimating the value of his estate was "not in excess of $700,000," was filed in probate court today. The bulk of the property was left to his two sons, James and George F. Getz, jr. Getz, former treasurer of the Republican National Committee, died on February 11 at Miami Beach.

8 Lives Lost in Flood.

Wellington, New Zealand (Saturday), Feb. 19 (AP).—Eight persons were known dead and 19 were missing today as a result of a flood disaster near Waikokopu on the north island of New Zealand. A river, swollen by heavy rains, burst its banks and washed away a railwaymen's camp.

Frances Hooper: Come Home and All Is Forgiven

Here is a message for Frances Hooper, 16-year-old Hines Junior High School senior—wherever she may be:

"Please come home, Frances, your mother and father are frantic with worry. There will be no scolding, no reprimands—just let us know where you are."

Appealing to The Post for aid in locating his missing daughter, William E. Hooper, 1230 D street southeast, said Frances left home last Saturday and has not been seen by friends or relatives since. Hooper doubted that Frances had eloped.

Frances wore twin red sweaters, a red skirt, brown shoes and plaid coat. She has brown hair and brown eyes, is 5 feet 1 inch tall and weighs about 120 pounds.

House Delays District's Tax Bill for Month

Chairman Nichols' Absence to Prevent Any Action Before March 14.

The District tax bill will not reach the House floor before March 14, if then, it developed yesterday, when Chairman Nichols, of the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs, disclosed that he would be out of the city the first part of next week.

Whereas Nichols had planned to report the bill to the full District Committee next Wednesday, his absence will delay the report another week and prevent any House action before March 14, the first District day of next month.

A delegation of Baltimore business men who have been protesting against the business privilege tax will be given a hearing Monday morning, but at least two members of the sub-committee will not be on hand to hear them.

Nichols was called to Oklahoma to deliver a Washington's Birthday address, and Representative Arnold (Democrat), of Illinois, also will be out of the city.

Representative Wood (Democrat), of Missouri, will preside over Monday's session.

Chairman Palmisano, of the full District Committee, arranged for the hearing of the Baltimore business men on Monday, although the Board of Trade had originally been promised that time.

The Baltimore business men, who admittedly do a large business in Washington have already enlisted the support of the Maryland congressional delegation to fight the business privilege tax because it forced them to take out District licenses and pay the gross receipts tax on trade done in Washington.

Most of the Maryland members have indicated they would fight the business privilege tax.

Only Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, has stated publicly that he believes the Maryland business houses should pay the tax so long as they sell goods in Washington.

Palmisano has been outspoken in his denunciation of the gross receipts tax. He has indicated he would support the income tax, however, as a substitute.

There will be no hearing before the sub-committee on Tuesday on account of the holiday, and plans for the remainder of the week are indefinite.

$130,097,052 Bill For 4 Departments Passed by House

By the Associated Press.

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a $130,097,052 appropriation for the State, Labor, Commerce and Justice departments in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The measure carried $16,608,750 for the State Department, $42,228,472 for the Justice Department, $46,926,880 for the Commerce Department and $24,332,950 for the Labor Department.

The total was $2,198,746 over the appropriation for this year, but $1,812,599 less than the Budget Bureau recommended.

Text of Business Relief Section of Tax Bill

Text of the pertinent sections of the 1938 revenue bill, which relate to the revised taxation of undistributed corporation profits, as tentatively approved by the Ways and Means Committee yesterday:

"General rule.—The tax computed under this subsection shall be as follows:

"(1) A tentative tax shall first be computed equal to 20 per centum of the adjusted net income.

"(2) The tax shall be the tentative tax reduced by the sum of

"(A) 16 per centum of the credit for dividends received provided in Sec. 26 (b) (of the present law); and

"(B) 4 per centum of the dividends paid credit provided in Sec. 27, but not to exceed 4 per centum of the adjusted net income.

"(b) Alternative tax (Corporations with net incomes slightly more than $25,000).—The tax computed under this subsection shall be as follows:

(1) The net income shall be divided into two divisions, the first division consisting of $25,000, and the second division consisting of the remainder of the net income.

"(2) To the first division shall be allocated, until an aggregate of $25,000 has been so allocated: First the portion of the gross income consisting of interest allowed as a credit by Sec. 26 (a) (relating to interest on certain obligations of the United States and Government Corporations); second, the portion of the gross income consisting of dividends received of the class with respect to which a credit is allowed by Sec. 26 (b); and third, an amount equal to the excess, if any, of $25,000 over the amounts already allocated to the first division.

"(3) To the second division shall be allocated, until there has been so allocated an aggregate equal to the excess of the net income over $25,000: First, the portion of the gross income consisting of interest allowed as a credit by Sec. 26 (a), which is not already allocated to the first division; second, the portion of the gross income consisting of dividends received of the class with respect to which a credit is allowed by Sec. 26 (b), which is not already allocated to the first division; and third, an amount equal to the excess, if any, of the net income over the sum of $25,000 plus the amounts already allocated to the second division.

"(4) The tax shall be equal to the sum of the following:

"(A) A tax on the $25,000 allocated to the first division computed under Sec. 14 (b) on the basis of the allocation made to the first division and as if the amount so allocated constituted the entire net income of the corporation.

"(B) 12 per centum of the dividends received allocated as such to the second division.

"(C) 32 per centum of the remainder of the amount allocated to the second division, except interest allowed as a credit under Sec. 26(a).

"(c) Corporations in Bankruptcy and Receivership—If a domestic corporation is for any portion of the taxable year in bankruptcy under the laws of the United States, or insolvent and in receivership in any court of the United States or of any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, then, when the tax is computed under subsection (c), the tentative tax shall be reduced by 4 per centum of the adjusted net income, instead of by 4 per centum of the dividends paid credit.

"(f) Joint-Stock Land Banks—In the case of a joint-stock land bank organized under the Federal farm loan act, as amended, when the tax is computed under subsection (c) the tentative tax shall be reduced by 4 per centum of the adjusted net income instead of by 4 per centum of the dividends paid credit. . . .

"(a) Special Class Net Income—For the purposes of this title the term 'special class net income' means the adjusted net income minus the credit for dividends received provided in Sec. 26(b).

"(b) There shall be levied, collected, and paid for each taxable year upon the special class net income of the following corporations (in lieu of the tax imposed by section 13) the tax hereinafter in this section specified.

"(c) Corporations With Net Incomes of Not More than $25,000.—If the net income of the corporation is not more than $25,000 and if the corporation does not come within one of the classes specified in subsections (d), (e), (f), (g), the tax shall be as follows:

"Upon special class net income not in excess of $5,000, 12½ per centum.

"$625 upon special class net incomes of $5,000 and upon special class net incomes in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $20,000, 14 per centum in addition of such excess.

"$2,725 upon special class net incomes of $20,000 and upon special class net incomes in excess of $20,000, 16 per centum in addition of such excess."

(Note. Sec. 14 of the bill also provides for special class tax treatment of banks and corporations under the China trade act of 1922 "the tax shall be an amount equal to 16 per centum" and in the case of foreign corporations doing business here, a tax of 20 per cent.

Effort to Slash $250,000,000 Relief Beaten Administration Emergency Bill Is Reported to Senate.

Resisting efforts to slash the $250,000,000 relief appropriation to $150,000,000, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday reported favorably the Administration's emergency appropriation.

The only substantial change made in the measure sent over from the House was deletion of the Lanham amendment, which required that no relief funds could be paid to aliens unless they could prove intention of applying for citizenship or had "lived honorably" in this country for 10 years.

Aubrey Williams, acting Works Progress administrator, sought to have this provision stricken on ground a section in the present relief act prohibits relief to aliens who are ineligible for citizenship.

Senator Frederick Hale (Republican), Maine, was author of the motion to slash the fund to $150,000,000, of which he would allot $75,000,000 directly to the States.

Attempts will be made Monday, when the measure is called up, to increase the appropriation to $400,000,000. Senators Robert M. La Follette, jr (Progressive), Wisconsin; Lewis D. Schwellenbach and Homer Bone, both Democrats of Washington, are expected to support a move to increase the total to $400,000,000. Republicans are expected to join with Administration regulars in sufficient numbers to kill this plan.

Sex Gland Find Curbs Cancer, Doctor Reports

Extract Reduces Tumors and Eliminates a Few, Physicians Told.

By the Associated Press.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Feb. 18.—A treatment for cancer with a substance obtained from sex glands was reported to a special meeting of the Fort Wayne Medical Society here today by Dr. Beaumont Cornell, supervising editor of the American Journal of Digestive Diseases and Nutrition.

He said the experiments have been done in both Fort Wayne and in the Lambeth Hospital Cancer Clinic in London, England. He quoted a letter from Dr. George F. Stebbing, chief of the Lambeth Cancer Clinic, reading:

"I am convinced that injections of the sort you have been using, here and in America, are destined to play an important part in the treatment of cancer in the future."

The sex gland extracts are obtained from cattle. In final form they are liquids which Dr. Cornell said were probably proteins. They are injected intramuscularly.

The product from male glands is used on women and that from female glands on men. The extracts, Dr. Cornell said, have no effect if given in case of the same sex.

Fifty cases of human cancer have been treated in Fort Wayne and London. Of these Dr. Cornell reported that about 90 per cent showed "marked regression," that is, decrease in size. A few, he went on, especially early cancers, have entirely disappeared.

Pain he said has been almost invariably relieved.

In all except the early cancers, patients were left with an apparently irreducible remnant of the growth. Against this remainder, said Dr. Cornell, the treatment has not yet proved effective. But, he continued, in many cases the remnant can be satisfactorily removed by surgery or x-rays.

Sub-basement Fire Drives Guests of Hotel Into Lobby

Women in negligee hastened into the lobby of the Shoreham Hotel early yesterday as a fire in the sub-basement ruined all awnings and furniture stored there and cut off telephones for a short time.

Order was quickly restored, however, as scores of firemen confined the blaze to the sub-basement and the telephone short circuit was repaired. Origin of the fire was unknown.

"Damage is likely to run as high as $20,000," Manager J. Gardner Moore said last night, but it is covered by insurance.

Gambrill to Run Again for House

Representative Stephen W. Gambrill (Democrat), of Maryland, announced yesterday that he would be a candidate for re-election from the Fifth Maryland District.

At the same time he declared he "resented very much" State Senator Joseph L. Donovan's accusation bad health had prevented his attendance in Congress. Donovan, Howard County Senator in the State Legislature Thursday, announced his own candidacy for the Congressional seat.

Gambrill said he had missed only three of the last 60 roll calls and that his absence on even these occasions was not due to poor health but to work on the Rivers and Harbors Committee.

Tapponier Given 3 to 15 Years for Slaying in Brawl

Convicted of the slaying of William M. Harris in a brawl in a Ninth street cafe last October, Louis J. Tapponier yesterday was sentenced to 3 to 15 years imprisonment when he was brought before Justice Jesse C. Adkins in District Court.

Tapponier was accused of shooting Harris after the latter had beaten him and had been arrested for assault.

After Harris was released on bond, Tapponier borrowed a pistol, and went to a lunchroom where he shot Harris.

Remon Re-elected Head of Boys Club

John A. Remon, vice president of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., was last night unanimously re-elected chairman of the Board of Managers of the Boys' Club of Metropolitan Police, at the annual dinner meeting of the board at the Ambassador Hotel.

Other officers re-elected included James E. Colliflower, president; Morris Cafritz, vice president in charge of buildings and sites; James A. Councilor, comptroller; Mrs. Edna Hummer Nick, assistant comptroller; Robert V. Fleming, treasurer; Isaac Roberts, assistant treasurer and L. Gordon Leech, secretary.

Maj. Robert A. McClure was unanimously elected vice president in charge of membership.

Ambassador Ships Are Planned by U. S.

By the Associated Press.

Some ocean liners can perform certain functions of ambassadors, the Maritime Commission believes.

Explaining a recent disclosure than the commission intends to place three "ambassadorial liners" in the South American service at an indefinite date, officials said yesterday such ships are luxury craft designed to give a nation prestige.

Mary O'Connor Freed in Girl's 'Puddle Death'

Jury Clears Physical Education Student on All Charges.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Feb. 18.—Mary J. O'Connor, physical education student, was freed today of all charges in the death of 5-year-old Nancy Glenn.

The State had charged the 19-year-old girl with murder, manslaughter and involuntary manslaughter. The State claimed Mary struck little Nancy with her hand and left her for dead face down in a mud puddle last Labor Day.

The child was found in a muddy lane near the O'Connor and Glenn homes beneath a crumpled piece of tin. An autopsy showed Nancy died from mud and water in her lungs.

Miss O'Connor testified in her own behalf yesterday that Nancy was standing beside her, teasing to be taken for a ride on her bicycle. She said:

"I swung around and hit her with the back of my hand . . . Nancy just fell."

She told of feeling for the child's pulse and finding it still; of covering the body with the tin and of fleeing in panic.

"If you believe the testimony of the defendant you must acquit her," Judge Joseph C. Sloan charged the jury.

The verdict came after the jury had been locked up more than 14 hours.

The girl sobbed in the arms of her father, Robert S. O'Connor, when she heard the verdict. She left the courtroom with him to join her mother who had been waiting in an ante room.

Later, when she had regained her composure, Mary said she would probably return to school.

"I'm pleased and happy that the jury believed what I said and acquitted me, because I told the truth," she said.

Auto Club Urges Mounted Traffic Police for Capital

The Keystone Automobile Club wants to return horses to Washington streets.

In a recommendation submitted yesterday to Senator William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, the club urged establishment of a mounted police unit to aid in controlling traffic.

Use of horse patrolmen, said George Keneipp, club manager, is extensive in several other large cities. They are effective weapons against downtown congestion and parking problems, he said.

The Commodity Credit Corporation reported yesterday loans totaling $218,548,251 of an average of 8.38 cents a pound on 4,996,622 bales of cotton as of February 17.

25 Are Killed In Tornado; 41 Among Injured

3 Still Missing in Wreckage of Louisiana Town.

By the Associated Press.

Rodessa, La., Feb. 18.—A winter tornado today left 25 dead and scores of homes and business houses splintered in this northwest Louisiana oil town of 2,000.

Three persons were missing and 41 injured.

Torrential rains fell in west Tennessee and eastern Arkansas. Creeks were out of banks in some sections and the rising White and Black rivers in Arkansas threatened overflows.

The heavy rain made the Rodessa section a foot-deep mud puddle. Wreckage was strewn along a path 200 yards wide and a mile and a half long.

National Guardsmen kept back sightseers. A detachment of State police aided them. Relief workers were busy on all sides.

The force of the tornado was gigantic. A huge boiler, its sides almost an inch thick, was bent and twisted.

T. Tevallan, a trucking contractor, escaped death because he left his house to get medicine for a sick daughter.

"I saw the storm head for my house," he said. "I hurried back but it was too late. I found my wife and infant child dead about 150 feet from the house."

Arkansas Fears Flood.

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 18 (AP).—Rain soaked Arkansas marshalled State and Federal forces today for a fight against a flood described by army engineers as potentially worse than that of 1935.

The Arkansas, White and Ouachita rivers, fed by days of torrential downpours throughout their watersheds, rose swiftly toward predicted record cresta.

A levee near Morrilton, on the Arkansas, broke. Hundreds of lowland residents were evacuated.

The House, mindful of recent floods in California and tornadoes in Louisiana, passed yesterday and sent to the White House a bill extending the life of the Disaster Loan Corporation through 1938.

The corporation, established by Congress in February, 1937, following severe floods in New England and the Middle West, has authorized a total of 7,525 loans aggregating $9,011,010.

Of these, 6,085 loans, amounting to $8,377,364, have been disbursed.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which was directed to capitalize the loan corporation to the extent of $20,000,000 (one-half of this amount has been paid in and the balance is available, if and when needed), said yesterday the authorized capital is sufficient to meet "any possible demands for the current year."

Car Motorman Is Held in D. C. Traffic Death

Witnesses Say Trolley Crashed Into Motionless Auto.

Lenton W. Sauls, 27, motorman for the Capital Transit Co., was held yesterday to the Police Court under the negligent homicide law in the traffic death of James Price, 88, of 147 Tennessee avenue northeast, by a coroner's jury.

The accident occurred January 9 at Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast. Price was a passenger in an automobile driven by William W. Winston, 32, of 1437 C street northeast.

Witnesses said the tram, with Sauls at the controls, crashed into the automobile, which was not in motion.

Sauls lives at 1605 Eames place northeast.

Meanwhile, Alfred Perry, 40, of Deal, Md., was treated at Casualty Hospital for a fractured skull after a head-on collision on the Southern Maryland Pike near Lyons Creek, Md. Charles Kirdmer, 51, also of Deal, also was injured.

Eva Chapman, 57, 1213 Girard street northwest, was treated at Casualty Hospital for a possible fractured pelvis after a "freak" street-car accident. Police say she was a passenger on a street car, and was knocked to the floor when the middle door opened inward at a stop at Eighth and E streets southeast to discharge passengers.

Ellen Hunter, 66, 2219 Prout street southeast, was admitted to Emergency Hospital for treatment of a hip fracture, received when she was knocked to the ground at Market Space and Eighth street northwest. Police said that Alton L. Atchison, 25, Falls Church, Va., srtuck the woman while he was backing into a parking space. He was charged with backing without due regard to safety.

Seven Bricklayers Fall 25 Feet When Scaffold Breaks

Seven bricklayers working on a new recreation building at the St. Albans School, Thirty-sixth and Garfield streets northwest, fell 25 feet to a concrete floor yesterday as a scaffold gave way.

Admitted to Georgetown Hospital were:

Fred Miller, 3525 Thirteenth street northwest, a fractured heel, lacerations and bruises; William P. Holliday, 1207 Emerson street northwest, lacerations and contusions; Gains F. Allen, Arlington, Va., back and leg injuries; James Brosmahan, 727 Third street northeast, back injury.

Treated and released were Superintendent Willard E. Rose, East Falls Church, Va.; Andrew G. Flaherty, 542 Ninth street northwest, and David Rambler, 904 New York avenue northwest.

Huberman to Talk In Modern Forum

The Modern Forum, meeting at the Washington Hotel tomorrow at 3 p. m., will hear Leo Huberman, economist and author, on "Your Money or Your Life." Huberman is head of the department of social science in the New College, Columbia University, and is now working on a history of trade unionism in America.

His address will be followed by discussions by Miss Fay Williams, of the Department of Labor, and Dean Elmer L. Kayser of George Washington University.

Republicans Map Drive to Attract Women's Support

By the Associated Press.

A campaign to get "Mrs. Republican" busy on a national scale before the 1940 Presidential election began yesterday.

Miss Marion Martin, assistant to the chairman of the Republican National Committee, approved the first application for membership in the proposed National Federation of Women's Republican Clubs of America. It was from the National Republican Club of Chicago.

Meanwhile a five-State conference at Montgomery, Ala., on April 4 and 5, will open a series of six regional meetings to be sponsored by the women's division of the Democratic National Committee.

Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, division chief, said yesterday the Montgomery meeting will attract Democratic women from Tennessee, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Langdon Pleads Not Guilty, Asks For a Lawyer

O'Donoghue to Assign Counsel in Limerick Slaying Today.

Robert F. Langdon, bulky, florid-faced former District policeman, pleaded not guilty to the murder of Beulah Limerick in District Court yesterday.

After listening to the court clerk formally charge him with firing a bullet into the head of Washington's one-time "Whoopee Girl," Langdon cleared his throat and almost before he was asked for a plea answered:

"Not guilty."

"Do you have a lawyer?" the clerk inquired.

"No, I haven't."

"Do you wish the court to assign one?"

"Yes—I wish it would."

With that, Langdon was whisked from the crowded courtroom by half-a-dozen Deputy United States marshals. He was returned to a basement cell room and a few minutes later was secretly taken from a side door and hurried to the District Jail in a private automobile.

Justice Daniel O'Donoghue said he would assign an attorney to defend Langdon this morning. The trial, it was predicted, will be postponed until after the court's spring recess.

Numerous lawyers jammed the courtroom yesterday after word went out that Langdon had not yet retained counsel.

Langdon was the "cop on the beat" the night Beulah was slain—December 30, 1930. He was arrested and questioned, but later released and dismissed from the force. His new arrest and indictment followed questioning of his wife, Mrs. Rose V. Langdon.

Person Unknown Slew Md. Worker, Jury Determines

Harry Janish, 43, farm laborer on the farm of William Thorpe near Laurel, Md., was killed by "a person or persons unknown," a coroner's jury sitting at Laurel decided yesterday. The inquest had been postponed at the request of Allen Bowie, Prince Georges County State's attorney.

Thorpe, who has been held under $3,000 bond after being questioned by police, was released. Janish was found Sunday night lying dead in the yard of the Thorpe farm where he lived in a small shack. His head had been beaten and a club lay beside his body.

Dr. Bryan J. Warren, who performed an autopsy, testified Janish apparently had been beaten by the club, but that he did not believe the beating sufficient to cause his death. Roy Janish, the dead man's brother, said he met Thorpe, drunk, on a road near the farm about 10 p. m. Sunday and Thorpe told him his brother was dead.

'Little Business' Is Incorporated

Charleston, W. Va., Feb. 18 (AP).—Little Business, Inc., an outgrowth of the President's conference in Washington, received a charter today. Five incorporators, all West Virginians, set forth as the principle of their proposed national organization:

"It is a non-profit, non-political organization, founded for the purpose of maintaining and perpetuating sound economic business principles in relation to the several governments of these United States."

Doorbell Robber Forces Woman to Produce Money

A six-foot 200-pound colored robber said to Mrs. Norma F. Mann, 1205 Farragut street northwest, yesterday afternoon as she answered the doorbell, "If you give me your money I won't hurt you."

He followed her through the basement office of her husband, Dr. John W. Mann, to a buffet in the dining room on the first floor where she gave him 85 cents, all the cash she had in the house.

"That will be enough to buy me a meal," the man said as he left by the same door. Mrs. Mann, who was alone in the house at the time, was so frightened she was unable to call police for an hour and a half, Sixth Precinct police said.

Freddie Bartholomew Avoids Paying Father

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (AP).—Freddie Bartholomew does not have to pay his father 20 per cent of his screen earnings this year, Superior Judge Clement D. Nye ruled today.

A provision of a court agreement whereby the child film star became the ward of his aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, was that he turn over to his parents one-fifth of his income. Counsel for the boy argued that Freddie would be in debt if he were compelled to adhere to the agreement this year.

Soviet Icebreaker Halts 5 Miles From Scientists

Moscow, Feb. 18 (U.P.).—The Russian icebreaker Murman radioed tonight that she had reached a 5-mile expanse of almost solid ice in the center of which the polar camp of four Soviet scientists was located 35 miles off the coast of Greenland.

It was believed the scientists, led by Dr. Ivan Papanin, who have been on the floe for 8½ months, will be taken off over the ice instead of by plane.

'Worker' Pickets Arrested Before Taxpayers' Office

Picketing of the District Taxpayers Association office at 1508 H street northwest by the District Workers Alliance was broken up quickly yesterday by police.

The alliance had announced a mass picketing of the office for noon because Rufus Lusk of the taxpayers' association had appeared before members of Congress to urge the District budget be held down.

Six members of the alliance were taken to the First Precinct where each deposited $10 collateral, after which they were released. They were charged with obstructing free use of public sidewalks.

Their names were Albert Lang, 2111 I street northwest; Jack M. Sherby, 1219 I street northwest and Mrs. Dora Shore, 3115 Georgia avenue northwest, all white; and Laura White, 784 Morton street northwest and Josephine Boyd, 906 Twenty-seventh street northwest, colored.

Childbearing cost the lives of 375,000 women in this country during the 25-year period ended in 1935, an average of more than one death an hour, the A. F. A. King Obstetrical Society was told yesterday.

The figure was presented by Dr. P. Brooke Bland, professor emeritus of obstetrics at Jefferson Medical College, at a scientific session preliminary to opening today of the annual post-graduate clinic at George Washington University.

Dr. Bland said the "lethal triad," septicemia, toxemia and hemorrhage, is responsible for 75 per cent of all puerperal mortality. He particularly stressed importance of early recognition of causes of hemorrhage.

Dr. Samuel M. Dodek, faculty adviser, spoke on aims and activities of the A. F. A. King Obstetrical Society. Composed of highest ranking members of junior and senior medical classes, it is named in honor of a physician who came here from Oxford in 1861 and received a degree at G. W. U.

A symposium on diseases of the heart and circulatory system will open the clinic proper this morning. The afternoon session will feature addresses by Drs. Roscoe W. Hall, H. D. Shapiro, George B. Roth, Howard F. Kane and Daniel L. Borden.

The twelfth annual banquet of the George Washington University Medical Society tonight at the Raleigh Hotel will close the sessions.

Jury Locked Up In Nolan-Jenkins Conspiracy Case

The District Court jury considering the case against William J. Nolan and Benjamin D. Jenkins, being tried on charges of conspiring to commit false pretenses, was taken to a hotel at 10:13 last night when it failed to reach a verdict after several hours deliberation.

Nolan, former head of the now bankrupt Nolan Motor Co., and Jenkins, a former office associate, are charged with presenting a group of conditional bills of sale for automotive units to the Munsey Trust Co., and with presenting bills of sale for the same units to the Universal Credit Co.

C. U. Man Given Yale Fellowship

A. Andrew Hauk, of the Catholic University Law School, has been awarded one of the 15 Sterling Fellowships for graduate study of law at Yale University Law School during the coming school year, it was announced yesterday.

Hauk, a graduate of Regis College, Denver, Colo., magna cum laude, will receive his LL.B degree from Catholic University this June. He has been attending the university on a scholarship offered by the J. K. Mullen family of Denver. At the law school he has led his class academically each year and has been president for the last two years.

Youth Pinned Under Car In Conduit Road Crash

Edward Davis, 19, of Brookmont, Md., was critically injured yesterday when his automobile overturned on a curve on Conduit road, a mile north of Brookmont.

Davis, who was pinned under the machine, was taken to Georgetown Hospital. He suffered fractured ribs, a crushed right arm, severe head lacerations and other injuries. Two companions, thrown clear of the car when it upset, also were treated at Georgetown Hospital. They were Albert Meek, 20, of Glen Echo, and Bruce Dills, 19, of Brookmont. Both suffered cuts and sprains.

2 Numbers Raids Net 5 Prisoners

Two numbers raids yesterday netted vice squad and Third Precinct police five colored prisoners.

In the 1200 block of New Jersey avenue northwest vice squad policemen under Sergt. George Deyoe seized a quantity of numbers slips and arrested William Blalock, 25, of 1238 New Jersey avenue northwest. Later police arrested Arthur O. Brown, colored, 38, 641 Q street northwest, and Florina Blake, 22, 647 Orleans place northeast, and charged all three with operating a lottery.

A second raid, in the 1800 block of L street northwest, was led by Detective Roy Blick, and police captured two colored men after smashing their way through locked doors and windows.

Seven Rescued From Coal Mine, 8th Dead in Mud

Hazleton, Pa., Feb. 18 (AP).—Seven coal miners who spent a black night "praying and waiting" were rescued today from a flood-blocked tunnel 500 feet underground. An eighth was found dead—buried in mud.

The men were trapped yesterday at the Lehigh Valley Co.'s colliery in nearby Jeanesville when water broke through from an abandoned, uncharted working, flooding passageways. Two other miners were washed through an exit to safety.

Hearing the onrushing torrent, the miners who were saved clambered to safety in a "rock hole" high in an underground wall and huddled there in darkness 18 hours while the water drained.

Rebels Outfeint Foes, Drive to Teruel Outposts

Advance Within Sight of City While Loyalists Mass in Hills.

By the United Press.

Saragozza, Spain, Feb. 18.—Many American volunteers of the loyalist international brigades were killed in hand-to-hand fighting today in an attempt to stem nationalist troops advancing down the Alfambra valley to within four miles of loyalist-held Teruel.

Whole sections of the 1,000-year-old city seized by the government last December 21, were reported in flames.

The 11-mile nationalist drive, which caught the enemy unawares, was estimated to have cost 500 loyalist lives. The government troops had massed 38 miles to the north in the Montalban sector to stop a nationalist feint there.

Striking between the Montalban forces and Teruel, Generalissimo Francisco Franco sent his troops across the Alfambra River east of Peralejos and drove the weakened government lines back.

The nationalists captured Peralejos, 8 miles north of Teruel; next took Chevas Labradas, 6 miles away; then seized the bridge across the Alfambra River at Villalba Baja, within sight of Teruel.

Advancing behind fleets of bombing planes and a devastating artillery barrage, the nationalists drove the government International Brigade from half a dozen positions.

Five hundred loyalists were slain on the banks of the Alfambra River near Peralejos, 8 miles north of Teruel, in a two-hour hand-to-hand battle.

Buenos Aires Hop Held Expression of U.S. Foreign Policy

Observers likened the latter demonstration inevitably to the epochal trip around the world made by the United States fleet in 1907-1909, when President Theodore Roosevlet sent 25 warships on a 45,000-mile voyage that touched at all continents in the first world-girdling trip of a complete Navy fleet.

Tha trip established the United States at one stroke as a world seapower. Yesterday's triumphant dash through South America just as clearly, observers hold, demonstrated the ability of the United States to maintain, forcibly if necessary, the Monroe Doctrine.

A week ago high-ranking naval officers told the House Naval Affairs Committee that the United States fleet, even with the proposed billion-dollar increase, could not successfully withstand an attack south of the Panama Canal.

The flight that took 48 men and a commanding officer on their one-stop journey to Buenos Aires via Lima, Peru, was the Army's graphic means of showing that the United States can aid any invaded South American republic in jigtime.

Fleet Visited Tokyo.

Coupled with persistent reports that Latin-American countries, disturbed by possible aggression from Europe or Asia, are preparing or have submitted a proposal for an inter-American Naval and military alliance, yesterday's flight added up to considerably more than a pleasure trip for a group of Army fliers.

In 1907 President Theodore Roosevelt, worried by Japanese expressions, determined on the globe-circling trip of the Navy as a conclusive demonstration of American naval might.

The fleet left Hampton Roads, Va., on December 16, 1907, circled South America, touched San Francisco, went to the Orient, and, at the express invitation of the Japanese government, rested in Tokyo several days, while Japanese statesmen, their eyes officially opened to American power at sea, issued a rapid-fire series of statements lauding the peaceful state of Japanese-American relationships.

After touching Australia, New Zealand and India, the fleet proceeded majestically through the Suez Canal, past Gibraltar and home to Hampton Roads on February 22, 1909, 29 years ago next Tuesday, where they were frantically hailed by the public, Navy-conscious for the first time in many years.

Previous Flights Compared.

Yesterday's flight was one of the most spectacular mass military flights in the history of aviation, the records reveal. The flight of Gen. Italo Balbo's 24 Italian seaplanes to the United States in 1933 involved 33 days to cover 6,063 miles, required 46 hours of flying in 15 days, used 8 air bases in foreign countries and had 11 surface vessels as base agents to cover flight movements.

Advance preparations for that flight began in May, 1933, and the flight finally started July 1.

Compare that flight with the streaking record of the "flying fortresses" which arrived yesterday, said strategists here, and America's closely knitted defense becomes clear.

On brief notice the six flying fortresses left Langley Field, Va., stopped at Miami, flew 2,695 miles to Lima, Peru, in 15 hours and 34 minutes, stopped for five hours and dashed down the western coast of South America to Valparaiso, Chile, whence they crossed the Andes at over 20,000 feet and then covered the breadth of South America to land in Buenos Aires in 13 hours, for a total elapsed time of 34 hours 15 minutes from Miami.

There the fliers will "participate" in the inaugural ceremonies of President-elect Robert M. Ortiz Sunday.

But every diplomat in every capital in the world knows why the flight was made.

So would Theodore Roosevelt....

versed a ruling unfavorable to the Lutheran pastor.

Three defense attorneys, who had been dismissed because the prosecution had insinuated they had had "treasonable dealings" with foreigners, were reinstated.

This sudden reversal was seen as an effort by Hitler to ease the pressure of his subordinates on the confessional churches generally. The Fuehrer, it may be assumed, realized the expediency of mitigating his anti-church drive at this juncture.

Heinrich Himmler, chief of all German police, was understood already to have circulated a secret decree forbidding members of the Schutz Staffel, Hitler's black-shirted elite guard, to forsake their religious ties.

The same reports said he also had issued instructions to Nazi Party members no longer to co-operate with the so-called German Christians, who deny the Old Testament and want the New Testament rewritten with certain parts—such as the Epistles of St. Paul—eliminated.

On the question of a prebiscite, Schuschnigg was reported to have been adamant against an expression of approval or disapproval of the authority of the constitution he put into effect in May, 1935.

The constitution declares Austria a Catholic Christian state and Schuschnigg, according to the report, would not submit to any revision of it.

First Anti-Semitic Decree.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Vienna (Saturday), Feb. 19.—Austria's first anti-Semitic decree, ordered by the new Nazi Minister of Interior after his conference with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler in Berlin, was issued today as the government announced that "no further measures" would be taken by Hitler to tighten his grip on the nation's affairs.

Minister of Interior and Public Security Arthur von Seyss-Inquart ordered mayors throughout Austria to cease collaborating with priests in baptizing Jews if the citizenship of the Jews was questioned.

The decree, preventing Jews from becoming baptized into the Christian faith pending determination of their citizenship, particularly affects thousands of German Jewish refugees who came to Austria after the Nazi accession to power in Germany.

The government's official announcement that "no further measures" were contemplated—an announcement made simultaneously in Vienna and Berlin—was accompanied by a statement that Austrian Nazis and all other political groups outside the Fatherland front, will remain outlawed.

Indication of German moves toward "collaboration" of Austro-German commercial affairs was contained in an announcement the managing director of the Austrian Insurance Co. and a pro-Nazi approved by Hitler, Dr. Hans Fischboeck, has been appointed advisor of the minister of commerce to deal with Austro-German trade matters.

Hitler, it was announced, has arranged to take measures to uphold Austria's sovereignty by prohibiting the German Nazis from interfering in the conduct of Austrian internal affairs.

The Austrian Nazis, outlawed in June, 1933 shortly before the Fatherland Front became the nation's only legal political body, will be permitted to operate only within the Fatherland Front and within the framework of the staende-state constitution of the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

All political parties, it was announced, remain forbidden in Austria.

The government communique was issued as hundreds of political prisoners, the bulk of them convicted Nazi terrorists, swarmed out of Austrian prisons and detention camps as police stood by with orders to treat them as "comrades."

Austrian Stocks Slide.

Vienna, Feb. 18 (AP).—Reports that Austria was to be drawn into the German four-year plan through a customs union caused Vienna stock exchange prices to drop today as much as 10 per cent.

A financier close to the stock exchange admitted a feeling of panic on the exchange. Traders were awaiting anxiously for definite economic announcements in Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler's Sunday speech to the Reichstag.

Banks and other savings institutions reported larger than average withdrawals. A lack of hard Austrian money was being felt increasingly and the national mint boosted its output 120 schilling pieces a minute. Hoarding was one of the explanations for the scarcity.

Mississippi House Kills Local Option Liquor

Jackson, Miss., Feb. 18 (AP).—The Mississippi House of Representatives defeated, 90 to 35, a local option liquor bill yesterday despite jibes of its sponsors that "we are being hypocritical." Since the Georgia Legislature recently passed a local option liquor bill, Mississippi, Tennessee, Oklahoma and Kansas remain the only "dry" States.

labor situation, and the other was the "dilemma" growing out of high shipbuilding costs.

President Roosevelt, in his letter accepting Kennedy's resignation, addressed him as "Dear Joe."

"It is with real regret," he said, "that I accept your resignation as chairman of the United States Maritime Commission. This is tempered by the fact that you are staying in the family and taking over a new assignment.

"I want to take this occasion to express my appreciation, so generally shared, for the fine work you have done. In both of your important Government assignments you have maintained your justly earned reputation of being a two-fisted, hard-hitting executive.

"It may gratify you to know that in going to your new post you carry with you our confidence and high wishes."

Admiral Land, who was appointed to the Maritime Commission along with Kennedy at the time of its creation, is 59 and a native of Canon City, Colo. He and another sailor-member of the commission, Rear Admiral Henry A. Wiley, were confirmed by the Senate despite attacks by labor spokesmen.

Land, a cousin of Charles A. Lindbergh and a football hero at Annapolis, was graduated from the Naval Academy with honors in 1902. He was assigned to the U. S. S. Oregon and spent two years at the Asiatic Station.

For a time during the World War, Admiral Land was on duty in the Bureau of Construction and Repair in the Navy Department. Then he was assigned to the staff of Admiral Sims in London. He was awarded the Navy Cross for his design and construction of submarines and for work in the war zone. In 1919, as Capt. Land, he served with the Allied Naval Armistice Commission and later was naval attache at the American Embassy in London.

In spirit and appearance, Land belies his age. He learned to fly when he was appointed assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics in 1926, and two years later he qualified for a Department of Commerce pilot's license. His last post in the Navy was as chief of the Bureau of Construction and Repair.

Max O'Rell Truitt, the President's choice for the vacancy created by Kennedy's departure, is a native of Columbia, Mo. With an A. B. from the University of Missouri, he came to Washington some years ago and entered the National University Law School.

In 1933 Truitt became a special counsel for the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and ultimately solicitor. Kennedy brought him to the Maritime Commission to handle the vast amount of legal detail growing out of the old ship mail contracts and the new direct subsidy agreements. Truitt is the son-in-law of Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, the Democratic leader.

son, Justice O'Donoghue issued 21 separate sentences of from three to four years each, with instructions that they be served consecutively. Thus, each has to be served in full until the final sentence comes up. McNair was given 17 separate sentences of from three to four years, Savage and Brady got from 3 to 12 on three cases, and McKinney got from 21 to 35 on seven robbery charges. In each instance, the men pleaded guilty.

The sentences imposed by Justice O'Donoghue followed imposition of life penalties on two men who were convicted of second degree murder last week.

Blamed for 40 Holdups.

As police reconstructed the picture, the bang operated from Baltimore, preying upon small merchants in Maryland and in the outskirts of the city. Their scheme, according to police, was to drive to Washington, stage a flock of holdups and flee the city before the police could be put on their trail.

They operated with uncanny skill in avoiding police traps, and it was not until detectives sensed that there was something wrong with the bandit car that they came to their downfall. Even then, a pistol battle ensued, and the police were forced to risk their lives in apprehending the bandits near the Peace Cross on Bladensburg road.

As police described a typical instance, the men would watch a small place, send in two or three armed men, and stage a holdup while others were on the outside watching for police and prepared for a quick getaway. They continued their operations for several months and at one time had become so bold they came into Washington on consecutive nights.

Approximately 40 armed robbery cases are attributed to the gang members, Krouse said.

Bill to Lighten Business Levy Hurried Along

Tax

visions of the bill, will be approved without change.

Main interest centers in undivided profits and capital gains provisions considered by the committee yesterday. Since the start of the recession in September, business men, big and small, have demanded repeal or modification of the levies and the President in his special session message more than three months ago called for removal of inequities in the law. Only the fact that the House has the constitutional prerogative of initiating tax legislation has blocked several independent efforts in the Senate to immediately modify both levies to give industry the relief it is urging.

Business Mostly Exempt.

Under the Ways and Means Committee bill, modified application of the undivided profits tax would be retained on corporations earning more than $25,000, a group representing 90 per cent of the corporate income, but only 10 per cent of the business firms.

Discounting the bill's maze of technical credits and deductions, the revised levy would operate to tax these large corporations 20 per cent if they withheld all of their earnings and 16 per cent if they paid all out in dividends.

Corporations earning less than $25,000 would be completely exempted from the undivided profits tax principle. These smaller companies, instead, would pay a flat "normal" tax of 12½ per cent upon the first $5,000 of earnings; 14 per cent upon the next $15,000 and 16 per cent upon the last $5,000 up to $25,000 of earnings.

Seek to Free Credit.

Broad changes are ordered in the method of capital gains tax computation in an effort to stimulate turnover of capital assets and release frozen credit. These changes in effect would provide a more gradual step-down of the percentage of gain or loss to be taken into account for tax purposes, would eliminate the highest surtax brackets on individual capital gains, and allow more liberal deductions of capital losses.

The capital gains section would provide a maximum of relief after assets had been held for 5 years. Thereafter, only 40 per cent of the gain or loss would be taken into account for tax purposes. On assets held under 13 months, 100 per cent of the gain would be subject to taxation. Percentage of gain or loss taken into account would be progressively reduced 2 per cent each month in the second year an asset is held, and reduced 1 per cent each month in the next three years, until the minimum of 40 per cent was reached.

Complicated language of the bill drew comment from Representative Allen T. Treadway, of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member, that, "the only class this bill will benefit are the tax lawyers." Tax experts before the committee conceded the complexity, but said technical verbiage was necessary to stop tax loopholes.

Flight

after the other five, the "crippled" bomber completed the hop from Lima in 11 hours and 10 minutes, shearing more than an hour from the time of its sisterships.

The six bombers carried 48 men besides the flight commander, Lieut. Col. Robert Olds.

Maj. Meloy cut approximately 500 miles from the distance covered by the five ships that preceded him by flying in almost a straight line southeast from Lima. The others went by way of Santiago, Chile.

To the greetings with which the tired fliers were welcomed were added the plaudits of newspapers.

La Razon said:

"Our great friend of the North can feel satisfied with the diplomatic effect achieved by means of the fraternal gesture of this long flight."

La Critica, which objected to the possibility Bruno Mussolini might visit Buenos Aires after his recent transatlantic flight to Brazil, said the spirit of the United States Air Corps flight "was quite different from that which has brought other fliers to these shores."

"None of them (the United States aviators)," it said, "bombarded cities; none of them spread horror and death among defenseless women and children."

The first five planes flew over the Pacific but close to the Peruvian and Chilean coastlines for about 1,700 miles of today's 2,500-mile flight from Lima.

They maintained radio communication among themselves but were out of sight of each other until they met by appointment near Santiago, Chile. There they went into formation and circled three times over the Chilean capital before climbing to 18,000 feet for the Andes crossing.

Arriving here, the crews said they were a "little tired and a little sleepy." The men used oxygen tanks for the high altitude flying.

The squadron came to Buenos Aires in connection with Sunday's inauguration of President-elect Roberto M. Ortiz. They will fly in formation with Argentine planes.

Among the new aviation records set by the good-will squadron was 34 hours and 14 minutes total time between Miami and Buenos Aires and 28 hours and 2 minutes flying time.

They also broke the 1937 record of a Peruvian army flier who covered the Lima-Buenos Aires leg in 13 hours and 38 minutes. The time of the "flying fortresses" was recorded as 12 hours and 13 minutes.

Reich to Build Commonwealth Of Nations, Von Papen Asserts

trian Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg.

It was that conference which ended the long years of tension between Germany and Austria, placed ardent followers of Hitler in key posts in the Austrian government and relaxed Austrian bans on Nazi efforts to bring about union with Germany.

Von Papen stole an hour from supervising his packing to explain that the entrance of Hitler as a force in Austrian affairs was a move toward peace not only with Austria but internationally.

Sees Uncertainty's End.

"Austria will be an example of how uncertainty in middle Europe can be swept away," he said. "This, as the fuehrer will say February 20 (to the Reichstag), is being done by Germany's agreement to guarantee Austrian integrity and independence.

"The developments mean that Nazis in Austria now can openly say they are Nazis. All that Germany wants in Austria is that nationalists have a right to express their views as other groups have.

"The world has been trying to believe there has been a split between Germany and Italy because of Italy's attempts to reach a close understanding with England. That is wrong.

"Germany will do the same thing. It is Italy's and Germany's sincere intent to establish permanent European peace. This cannot be done without the understanding and friendship of the great powers.

Peace Preffered England.

"Germany is holding her hands out to England in friendship provided England recognizes Germany's natural human demands for return of colonies."

Von Papen, who brought Hitler's invitation for the conference to Schuschnigg, said Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy was completely satisfied with the new Austro-German arrangement, which "doubtless" was first discussed by them when Mussolini visited Berlin last fall.

He scouted reports that, during the three days of grace which Hitler gave Schuschnigg to accept the accord, Schuschnigg vainly tried to reach Mussolini for help and when Il Duce refused to talk to him was forced into an agreement more sweeping than Mussolini had expected.

A closer Austro-German military agreement would not be necessary, Von Papen said, because the two countries have entirely common military interests based on their pre-World War alliances and their common role in the World War.

Prices

Concluding this statement, Mr. Roosevelt, a school teacher's pointer in hand, swung around in his swivel chair and on large charts indicated the trends and price disparities to which he referred in the statement.

On one chart he pointed out that at the bottom of the depression a wide gap existed between the average of prices for finished products and those for raw materials, but that the disparity became smaller until the lines met late in 1936. For a period the average raw material price exceeded that for finished products, but commencing last spring the gap again began to widen, as raw material prices fell more rapidly than did those for finished products. Mr. Roosevelt pointed out that factory employment continued to increase as long as the disparity narrowed, but commenced to decline when the gap widened.

On another chart he pointed out that living costs had not declined, either during the depression or since last summer, to the same degree as the fall in per capita income. He cited the trend of the wholesale prices for cotton, wheat, hogs and corn.

Building Chart Stressed.

The chart which he termed the most significant indicated the prices of cement, structural steel, wallboard, outside house paint and plaster had either been comparatively stable or had increased since late 1933 or early 1934 and had not been affected by the current recession.

The average price for structural steel was shown to be 118 per cent above the 1929 level, with cement prices at 105 per cent, and wallboard and outside house paint at approximately 92 per cent of the 1929 level. Plaster prices were recorded at almost 180 per cent of the 1929 average.

Turning away from the charts, the President said he had anticipated that a number of questions would be asked regarding his formal statement and that he had jotted down some questions and prepared the answers. He invited further questioning when he had finished giving his own question and answer statement.

The first question he asked himself was what was to be done about the present situation. He said the problem was being attacked on many fronts and that many items of his recovery program were involved, notably the farm and housing bills and the expanded relief program. They were all aimed at a better balance of prices.

"Does this mean inflation?" was the President's next question.

"No," he replied with emphasis, asserting that one could not speak of inflation and balanced prices as going together.

"Does this mean further devaluation of the dollar?" the President asked.

"No," again was the answer given with greater emphasis.

Gold Policy Involved.

Was the Treasury action in modifying the gold sterilization policy last Monday a part of his program for dealing with the situation?

"It was, but there were other items on the program."

"How could his statement of today be reconciled with his warning last April against prices becoming too high?" asked the President.

He replied he would answer by saying that you would not blame a man who cautioned you to slow down going around a curve if you ran off the road. Price dislocation, he added, was one of the major causes of the recession. It began in 1936 and encouraged speculative buying. He said looking back on his April statement he now felt that perhaps he should have made it a month or two earlier.

"What about credit?" was the next question the President propounded to himself.

"The Administration through Treasury and Federal Reserve policies "expected to maintain easy credit conditions," he replied.

"Was it intended that the 1926 price level should be restored?" the President asked.

"The answer," he said, was "yes and no." It was not a question of restoring the price level of 1926 or any particular year. The problem was to seek a balanced relationship between prices that would maintain full employment and sustain the Nation's debt burden. In 1933 and 1934 the objective was to restore the 1926 level because most indebtedness had been contracted on that price level. Thus the 1926 price average was regarded as reflecting the loan dollar. Since 1933 and 1934 there had been a great deal of borrowing, in which the dollars loaned reflected the price levels of those and subsequent years. In adjusting prices the purchasing power of the dollar in 1935 and 1936 had to be taken into consideration as a modifying factor.

About Labor Costs.

"Are labor costs too high?" was the President's next self-imposed question.

The real answer to lower costs of production, he replied, was to be found in increased volume rather than in lower wages. Despite the fact that earnings per hour in manufacturing were 24 per cent higher in 1936 than in 1932, labor costs per unit of output were only 6 per cent higher. This was due, he continued, in part to the fact that the productivity of labor had increased, but primarily was due to the fact that labor can be used far more efficiently in mass production industries when they operate at high volume.

This point, he said, was demonstrated by the fact that in the last five months, despite the fact wages had not increased, shrinking volume forced up labor costs per unit of output as much as they had risen per unit of output between 1932 and 1937—or 6 per cent.

He said he favored all efforts to stabilize employment that will make it possible to reduce the costly insurance of high hourly rate on a small number of hours of irregular work and substitute assured jobs that will produce a much higher annual income.

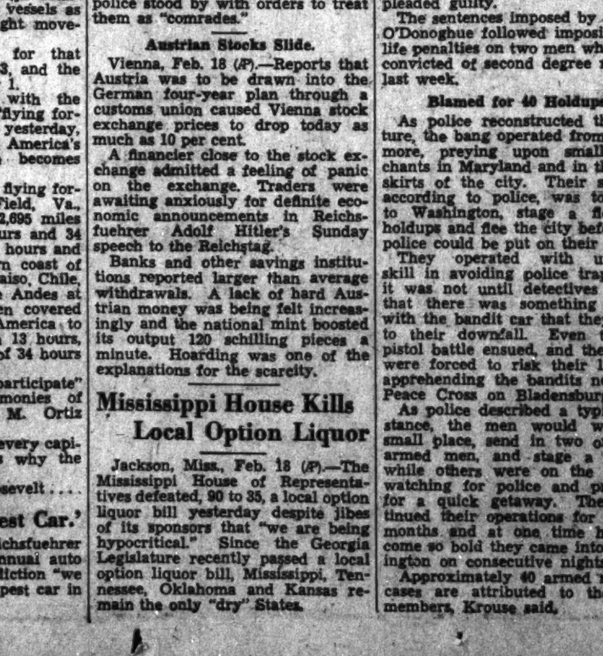
"Did wages rise too fast last spring?" asked the President.

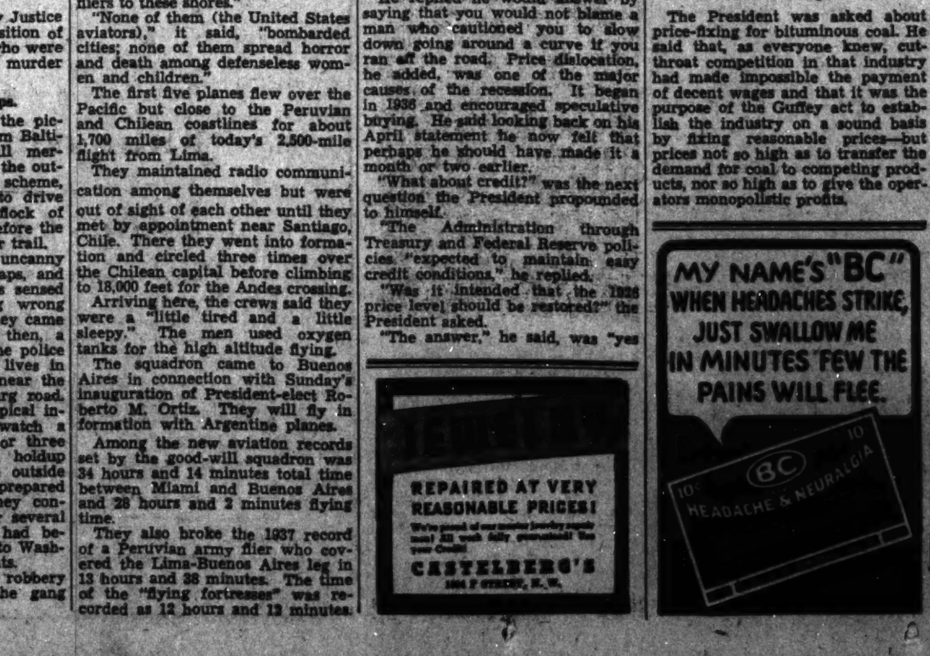
"There were very few wage increases from 1934 until October, 1936," he replied. In the next nine months average hourly earnings in manufacturing industries rose from about 57 cents to 65 cents an hour. It was known, he added, that many firms were in a position to increase wage rates in 1935 and 1936. He said he did not think it was healthy for business to have postponed so long wage increases that they subsequently had to absorb in a large lump in nine months.

The President said that during downswings people spoke of the need for flexible wages and felt that wages should fall. During recovery, he said, they seemed to forget that wages also should be flexible and should rise. They delay wage increases to the last possible moment and then at the peak of a boom grant wage increases that are small when measured against current profits, but are difficult to maintain when volume of production falls off. The automobile industry was the prize illustration of that he said. If wage increases were not so long delayed, but were made as business improved, he added, business managers would have a longer period of activity in which to adjust themselves to wage changes.

Hits Coal Competitors.

The President was asked about price-fixing for bituminous coal. He said that, as everyone knew, cut-throat competition in that industry had made impossible the payment of decent wages and that it was the purpose of the Guffey act to establish the industry on a sound basis by fixing reasonable prices—but prices not so high as to transfer the demand for coal to competing products, nor so high as to give the operators monopolistic profits.





Roosevelt Lets RFC Resume Its Business Loans

Loans

to industry—to "all types of business, little and big," as Jones termed it.

Jones said the RFC always had taken a liberal and reasonable attitude toward applications for loans but insisted that it did not propose to advance money without a reasonable assurance of repayment of the loan. So-called little businessmen have criticized as too strict the past attitude of the RFC in making industrial loans. This the chairman denied, pointing out the RFC had been so liberal that 23 per cent of its past industrial loans now are in default.

Won't Relieve Frozen Loans.

One thing Jones made clear. He said the RFC, in resuming the lending of money, will not "relieve" banks or other lenders of present frozen loans."

The President's letter to Jones, made public by the latter at a special press conference, follows:

"While the modifications we have heretofore made in your lending authority since my letter to you of October 18 permit emergency loans of various character, it is my wish that you make credit available to all deserving borrowers to which you are authorized to lend, especially loans that will maintain or increase employment."

Jones asserted the RFC preferred that banks make and originate the new loans, "selling the RFC a participation in them, sharing equally or ratably as to collateral and repayments with the RFC."

"Ordinarily," he added, "we would prefer that the lending bank retain a 50 per cent interest in the loan, but if necessary we will consider taking a greater participation, depending on the circumstances surrounding the particular loan.

Banks Can Get Aid.

"We will also reinstate our agreement to permit banks to carry an entire loan with a call on the RFC to take up such portion of it as may be agreed upon at the time the loan is made. For this we will require a charge based upon the amount and duration of the loan. This charge will come out of the interest paid by the borrower. Our rate on industrial loans has been 5 per cent and this appears to be a fair rate. However, if some of the smaller banks feel that they should have a 6 per cent rate we will not object, but whatever the interest rate it should include any charge the RFC makes for underwriting the loan.

"It will not be our purpose to relieve banks or other lenders of presently frozen loans, but to cooperate with them in making new loans of the character specified.

"While we prefer that banks originate and participate in the loans, and believe it would be better for all concerned for them to do this, we will make loans without bank participations when necessary."

Wallace Fixes Tobacco and Cotton Quotas

Two-Thirds of Producers in 20 States Now Must Vote Approval.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace proclaimed marketing quotas yesterday on the 1938 crops of cotton and flue-cured and dark types of tobacco, thus invoking the new farm law's provision for meeting surpluses.

The quota system—a mechanism which officials say is designed to keep surpluses off the market until they are needed—will be voted upon March 12 by affected producers in 20 States. Two-thirds of those voting must approve to put the quotas into effect.

26,300,000 Acres of Cotton.

Under the quotas, the total supply of cotton which would be permitted to move into market channels free of penalties would be that produced on 26,300,000 acres. If the yield were at the average rate of the last 10 years, the amount would be about 11,230,000 bales, compared with the record crop of 18,747,000 last year.

One objective of this program would be to divert from cotton approximately 8,000,000 acres planted to that crop last year.

Wallace estimated the cotton surplus from previous years would total about 12,000,000 bales on August 1, the date the new crop usually starts to market. Officials said this was almost enough to supply normal domestic and export needs for a whole year.

The flue-cured tobacco marketing quota was set at 705,000,000 pounds, compared with last year's production of 850,000,000 pounds.

Quota Is Reduced.

The quota for the dark tobaccos was fixed at 145,000,000 pounds, compared with 158,000,000 harvested last year.

States in which the cotton referenda will be conducted are Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, North and South Carolina, Texas, Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Missouri, Arizona, Kansas, New Mexico and California. States in which the tobacco referenda will be held are Kentucky, Tennessee, Virginia, Indiana, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Alabama.

Raccoon Builds Nest In Hagerstown Home

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 18 (AP).—A raccoon has moved in with the Aaron Light family. Mrs. Light said the 'coon, apparently a stray pet, had made itself at home on the second-floor rear porch, building a nest and showing no alarm at her presence. Mrs. Light said she wasn't alarmed either but she hoped the owner, if any, would call for the furry visitor.

CALIFORNIA, HERE I COME! Thirty or more employes in Internal Revenue's general counsel's office, board of review, and technical staff are slated for a nice stay in Los Angeles where, according to legends, never wind blows harshly and the birds sing all day long. Lucky people!

This was learned, in prying behind the announcement of establishment (by March 1) of a special branch of the Bureau of Internal Revenue in Los Angeles. The office is to review income-tax cases originating in southern California and Arizona. The establishment will consist of accountants, engineers and other tax specialists of the same skill and experience as the men who handle contested cases for the country as a whole in the office of the Commissioner here.

With profound distress, we hear that the I. D. R. A. has gone broke!

The up-and-coming organization (But no, that is wrong, the I. D. R. A. already has arrived) has put on so many extravaganzas, dances, badminton games, archery contests, turkey shoots, beauty contests, amateur dramatics, photography contests and the like that the treasury may soon have to go on relief. The financial comeback is slated for tonight.

They will trip in honor of George Washington's birthday anniversary, and, incidentally, for the first time since the Halloween ball. The department's official family and their wives will be the patrons. Those who will help make the hours enjoyable for you are:

We don't know what this means—whether it may be taken literally, but, anyway, the Iowa State Society writes in: "Clashing of swords in fencing bouts between the Army, Navy and Marine Corps will thrill Iowans and their friends attending the George Washington birthday party to be given at the Shoreham Hotel on Washington's birthday from 9:30 to 1 a. m." There will be square dancing, big-appleing and the minuet. Of the high-ranking officers from Iowa invited as honor guests are Admiral William D. Leahy, Maj. Gen. George A. Lynch, Brig. Gen. Frank C. Among other questions raised to Director Bane by Local 17, U. F. W. A. (Baltimore SSB), upon its visitation here the other day: The question of a 35-hour week for the midnight shift, which has been set up temporarily in Baltimore. The union pointed out that the already existing congestion at entrances and in elevators of the Candler Building was aggravated by the reduction of the time elapsed between the various shifts.

"Whereas, previously, when two shifts were working, there was a half-hour period between them, in order to accommodate the third shift this period has been reduced to 15 minutes. The natural concomitant of such a state of affairs," the union stated, "was an increase in lateness, and the loss of time in starting shifts. Slight, though, this might be in each individual case, when multiplied by more than 5,000 times, it amounts to considerable loss of time and efficiency. For there are now more than 5,000 employes in the Candler Building. The only solution," the union asserted, "lay in a 35-hour week for the midnight shift, which would allow for a longer period between shifts."

38 Navy Men Are Promoted By Roosevelt

Lieut. Comdrs. Fischer and Bisset to Become Commanders.

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the promotion of 38 naval officers.

In the Civil Engineer Corps five officers were advanced to the rank of commander. Among them were Lieut. Comdr. Hugo C. Fischer, in charge of constructing the model ship basin at Carderock, Md., and Lieut. Comdr. Andrew Gustave Bisset, a Washingtonian, now on duty at the Naval Academy.

Lieut. Comdrs. George D. Wetsel, Norfolk, Va., Melrose, N. Y.; Valentine J. McManus, New York City, Kew Gardens, N. Y., and Lewis N. Moeller, San Diego, Calif., New York City.

Supply Corps officers advanced to captain are:

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

I have nothing but sympathy for declarers who, faced with an absolutely blind guess, make the wrong decision. I must admit, however, that I am a little impatient with partners who use that word "guess" as a standard alibi. I was the helpless dummy in the following hand, when my partner "guessed wrong." South, dealer.

West opened the diamond King and, when declarer's Queen fell, shifted to the heart King. Declarer won and led the Jack of clubs toward dummy's King. West ducked and so did the declarer! East swooped down with his Queen and returned a heart. Declarer was down one!

I sat in stunned silence as my partner bewailed his luck. Said he, in a plaintive tone, "I'm sorry, but I certainly thought West had the Ace, Queen and a small club for his double."

"And did you also think," I asked in the sweetest tone I could muster, "that West was a moron? Did you think that holding Ace, Queen and a small club he would deliberately risk the loss of the Queen by ducking to the Jack, when all he had to do to assure himself of two trump tricks was to put up the Ace, so as to keep the small one for the King?"

"I never thought of that," said my partner in a small voice.

The Community Objects.

Being voteless, District residents have no direct influence on the affairs of the city. The most they can do is to suggest. An energetic few climb a rostrum for this purpose. But the majority prefer to talk through the printed word. Letters to the editor, then, take on an unusual significance in Washington. They are as accurate a barometer of public opinion as is available.

The selection of letters published elsewhere on this page today is a case in point. Washingtonians, plainly, are aroused by The Post's revelations of privileges abused by a handful of Congressmen. Within a few days the Commissioners are scheduled to meet in regular monthly conference with the police chiefs. Presumably the question of Congressional traffic violations has been added to their agenda. However, the entire matter may be constructively settled before the meeting.

Capitol leaders, if they are sincere in their regard for Washington's best interests, will have noted this instance of public resentment. And, by a hint here and there, they can quietly put a stop to the petty procedure of a few members whose actions are properly resented by a disfranchised, but not servile, populace.

In The Field Of The Spirit.

For the past five years Austria has been in the grip of a dictatorial regime. But that dictatorship has been political. It has not been racial and it has not been cultural.

Indeed, from a cultural point of view, the establishment of the Third Reich was by way of being a boon to Austria. It brought to that land dozens of outstanding musicians, writers and artists who were forced to flee from Germany, either by reason of forced exile or because they could not endure the atmosphere of oppression which there controls.

This may be the case no longer. Anticipating that Austria's "co-ordination" to Germany may be far-reaching, such musicians as Toscanini and Emanuel List, of the Metropolitan, have already canceled engagements at Salzburg, Europe's great summer music capital. And they are doing this for the same reason that they have refused to perform in Germany.

Let it be hoped they are wrong in their anticipations. The disappearance of Austria as a cultural entity would be, in many respects, an infinitely greater loss than the disappearance of Austria as a political entity. Boundaries may change while art endures. But there is more than a threat that elimination of the German-Austrian boundary would also mean the disappearance of the last important area where the unfettered German spirit could continue to function in the artistic field.

Washington's Workless.

There is good reason to doubt that the Federal apportionment act, largely limiting Government jobs to non-residents, is a factor of importance in the local unemployment problem. Elwood Street, the competent District Welfare Director, suggests that this legislation is instrumental in the problem. But even if a much greater number of Government positions were assigned to District residents, few relief workers would be able to qualify, since they are preponderantly unskilled.

The magnetic quality of the Federal Capital does, of course, bring in some seekers after Government jobs who become public charges. But the main body of local unemployed are augmented chiefly by the inflow of the unskilled, many of whom seem to drift here with no very certain purpose. An influx of this kind is extraordinarily difficult to handle in a non-industrial city like Washington. Indeed, in the absence of normal industrial outlets, the employable unemployed tend to become a permanent addition to work-relief rolls, whether times are good or bad.

Because of this handicap the welfare director proposes that local "light" industries might be set up by private interests, and that the Federal Government might establish factories to produce goods needed by public agencies. The need will have to be very acute to overcome opposition to altering the non-industrial character which gives Washington so much of its appeal.

Apart from objections to industrializing the Capital City, however, this plan has another serious defect. The projected new industries would tend to lure into the District more unemployed, with the probable result that the number in need of relief would not be sensibly diminished and might even be increased. Moreover, if the newly established factories at any time found it necessary to reduce their scale of operations and dismiss their workers, the District's relief problems would become further complicated.

There would seem to be more promise in Mr. Street's suggestion that, other things being equal, Washington employers make a general practice of employing Washingtonians. If that custom were adhered to it would not only tend to take local residents off the relief rolls but would in time discourage the drifter type which has had much to do with aggravating Washington's unemployment problem.

Symptoms And Malady.

In the "policy of abundance" statement made by the President yesterday it was remarked that "An important factor that determines whether we shall succeed or be blocked in our endeavor to attain full employment and a high level of income is the behavior of prices."

Unquestionably a well-balanced relationship between prices of various commodities and "between commodity price levels and the levels of debt burdens and costs," is necessary as a solid foundation for economic progress. But to aim at a balanced system of prices is not equivalent to achieving it. Nor can such a laudable objective properly be referred to as a policy or program until it is supplemented by specific recommendations which were completely absent in yesterday's statement.

As a matter of fact, official concentration on problems of price behavior is of itself disturbing to business. For it indicates that Government is disposed to deal with symptoms instead of trying to remove basic causes of industrial maladjustments.

The President says, for instance, that a moderate selective rise in prices is now desirable, but that it must not be so sharp or continuous "as to lead to a repetition of the unhealthy speculative conditions of a year ago." There is not a hint, however, as to the methods by which this ideal balance is to be attained. Nor is there the slightest indication of a realization that the unhealthy rise in prices, as well as the subsequent collapse, was due to misdirected governmental policies instead of to the perverse behavior of prices themselves.

Although the President says that the Administration aims to promote full employment of our human and material resources, almost nothing has been done during the Roosevelt depression to encourage business expansion. That is essential to provide increased employment and stable support for the sagging price structure. Yet, in spite of much talk about closer co-operation between Government and industry, the housing act remains the only constructive legislative measure enacted in the three months since the beginning of the extra session.

Indeed, it is only within the past few days that the President has ceased to think in terms of the boom psychology of the vanished recovery era, and has turned to discussion of the problems of deflation. In face of the tremendous drop in industrial activity and in various commodity prices since the end of last summer, this is a very tardy confession that times are bad.

Now that there is official acknowledgment of the existence of a serious depression, the Administration should clearly take prompt and positive steps to free business from hampering restraints and to assist it in shouldering the load it is continuously exhorted to assume. There should be an end to the "rabble-rousing" attacks upon so-called big business by Administration spokesmen. Furthermore, the President should amplify his statement of general price objectives by outlining a definite program of action, practicable and helpful to recovery.

First and foremost, action on the tax bill, which has dragged along for weeks in committee, should be speeded. Modification of the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes, even if it failed to bring the relief anticipated or needed, would nevertheless have a very beneficial effect upon business sentiment. It would at least indicate that the Administration is no longer resolved to use the tax system for punitive purposes.

It would also be helpful if the Administration would make peace with the utilities and generally cease to associate bigness with badness. Careful amendment of the Wagner act, stiffened resistance to new spending appeals and positive promises to refrain from further tampering with the monetary system are likewise suggestions for overcoming fears which have all too clearly gone far to paralyze private initiative.

All these and other proposals for combating the current depression have been recommended by representatives of both big and little business in recent weeks. So far the response has not been encouraging. It will continue to be discouraging as long as symptoms and malady are confused.

Happy Birthday To You!

Report now has it that you can go into a New York telegraph office and pass change over the counter with the result that a mellifluous female voice will call up your designated friends (or enemies) and croon a greeting to them to the tune of this or that popular song.

It is possible. Unfortunately all things seem possible. And report further asserts that telegraph and telephone executives in other cities have expressed a willingness to follow the example set. Some of them have drawn the line at sending kisses. The party at the other end, they explain, might not quite know whether he was getting a kiss or the raspberry.

Where the news has deep and significant implications is in the expectation of an extension of the system. Consider:

A. B. gets a bill from C. O. D. Instead of writing out a check he goes to the telegraph office. Presently C. O. D. hears a sweet voice singing:

Think of me only as one wise
To bill collectors' skill.
So kiss the thing good-by, old top.
I cannot pay this bill.
And if I sent a rosy check
It would not honored be;
But marked "No Funds," without a doubt,
And then returned to thee.

To the tune of "Sweet Adeline" there could be excuses for failure to show up at the office. Notification of urgent summer business necessitating absence would be phoned to the tune of "Take Me Out to the Ball Game." The list is endless. And for the first time we see promise in the system of form telegrams from which all these possibilities emanate.

Value Of Plain Speaking.

A public official who knows how to state unpleasant facts without becoming an object of popular dislike is a valuable member of any government establishment.

Joseph P. Kennedy, the retiring chairman of the Maritime Commission and former head of the S. E. C., is one of those rare individuals who possesses the gift of plain speaking with a disarming method of presenting his views. No doubt such qualities will serve him well in his new post as Ambassador to the Court of St. James. But however successful he may be in his diplomatic career, the pioneer work he has done in two important regulatory offices will scarcely be overshadowed.

It is characteristic of Mr. Kennedy's methods that on his last day of active duty as head of the Maritime Commission, he addressed a letter to the President expressing concern about the trend of shipbuilding prices in this country. The situation disclosed in his letter is not only serious, as he says, but puzzling. Mr. Kennedy makes no attempt to explain what he considers to be unjustifiably high bids on certain types of cargo vessels for which the commission recently solicited bids. He simply calls attention to certain significant facts, notably the tremendous disparity between prices charged by American and foreign builders.

Three vessels under construction in Belfast, for instance, are being built for about one third the average of the bids received from the large American yards for vessels of similar construction. Even if wages were double those of the war era, they would not account, it is said, for the present prices quoted by American yards.

Mr. Kennedy concludes that private industry cannot afford to build at such prices, even with Government assistance. Hence, he suggests various alternatives, including construction of subsidized vessels in foreign shipyards whenever American prices are more than twice those ruling abroad. This is a drastic remedy but it emphasizes the gravity of the problem. Mr. Kennedy was no less blunt in his manner of speaking when he denounced the chaotic labor conditions in the shipping industry and recommended stern measures for coping with a desperate situation.

The surest way to build up an efficient merchant marine lies in frank recognition of the difficulties of the task and the cost involved. If the American people are unwilling to pay the price, that is another matter. At least they have the right to know the pertinent facts. That has evidently been the conviction of the retiring head of the Maritime Commission. To his colleagues is left the hard task of getting action on the very definite and often stiff proposals that have been the outcome of preliminary investigations.

Even the motion-picture stars still retain a degree of respect for the institution of marriage. They wait, albeit impatiently, until the honeymoon is over before applying for divorce.

"This country spends $13,000,000,000 annually for sin. That's entirely too much," declares a New York minister. That's typical of Americans; they always demand the most expensive.

Vindication After 20 Years.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

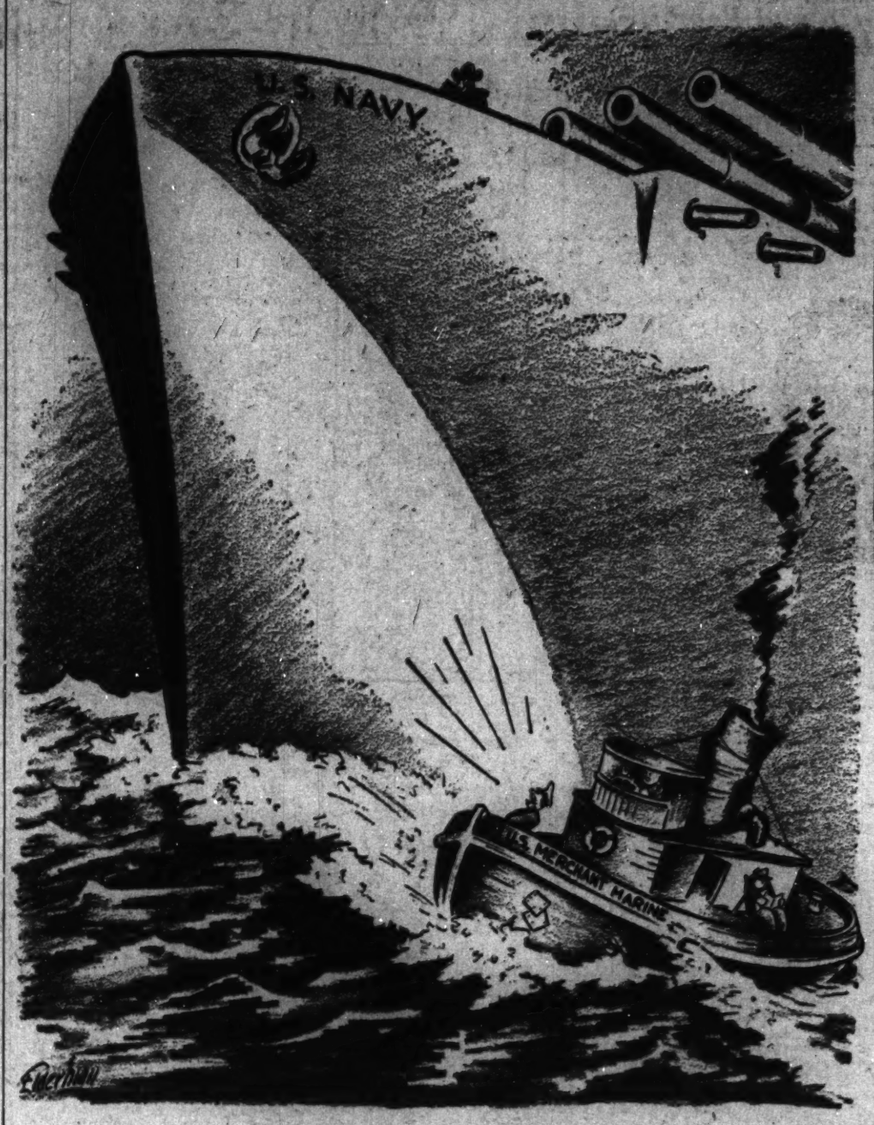
The University of Minnesota's board of regents has just righted a grievous wrong, committed more than two decades ago. Prof. William A. Schaper, a distinguished faculty member of 18 years' service, was the victim. He had opposed American participation in the World War. But when this country entered the conflict, he did his duty as a good citizen and urged others to do the same. Nevertheless, charges of disloyalty were brought by a super-patriotic group.

Without advance notice, without a chance for defense, without evidence or testimony against him, Prof. Schaper was dismissed from his post. Thus discredited, it was eight years before the subsidence of war hysteria made it possible for him to obtain another academic post, when the University of Oklahoma opened its doors to him.

The regents, acting upon a letter from Gov. Benson, now have reviewed the case. They have exonerated Prof. Schaper, confessed the unfairness of the 1917 proceedings and have offered amends: a title of professor emeritus and a grant of $5,000. By having the courage to reverse the previous action, the university has done what Prof. Charles A. Beard, in an article on the case in the New Republic two weeks ago, had urged it to do:

> . . . correct the record and do full justice, for its own sake, for the sake of a man wronged and, above and beyond, for the sake of education in our democracy and the humanity it serves.

It is rare to find an institution reversing itself in a case of this sort. The Minnesota episode is a happy exception, and gives renewed strength to freedom of inquiry in America.



Do You Want To Race, Admiral?

"Traffic Law Not for Congressmen"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hurrah for The Post!

Your courage in reporting the attitude of members of Congress toward our traffic regulations is highly commendable.

Without intending a blanket indictment, I think it is fair to say that probably a very large percentage of the members of both houses of Congress share the feeling that they are above the laws which we voteless taxpayers are governed by. One might go further and include a host of bureaucrats, officials high and low in the departments, commissions, boards, etc., who are prone to arrogate to themselves all the special privileges they think they can get away with.

A revival of real democracy is badly needed in this country—a resurrection of the idea that those elected to public office are servants of the people, not their masters.

Expose usurpation whenever you find it, whether it be of rights which the Constitution gives to one branch of the Government, or the privilege of setting aside laws found necessary for orderly living under the Constitution.

More power to you.

C. L. CHAPIN.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to commend you for the courageous article in The Post of February 17 regarding the traffic violations of Congressmen.

It is generally accepted that nothing can be done about the traffic violations by the foreign diplomatic representatives—not more than a week ag I saw an automobile with a "DPL" license plate boldy drive through an arterial-stop street without even hesitating—but something should be done to remind the Congressmen that they are representatives of a democratic government.

I have no doubt that your article will cause displeasure on "the Hill" which will result in the application of "pressure" on your paper. More power to you!

It has been said that a gentleman, among other things, is one who does not use his position to obtain rights or privileges to which he is not entitled. Is it not too bad that our law makers cannot be classed as gentlemen! R. E. C.
Arlington, Va., Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Great credit is due The Post for its courage in publishing the article "Traffic Law Not for Congressmen." I have not the least idea it will in any manner change the long-established custom, but at least it relieves Mr. Ordinary Motorist to read in public print what he has resented for years.

However, while we are sympathizing with the impotent police officer, he should be reminded to remove the beam from his own eye. There are quite as many unjustifiable violations of traffic regulations by police officers in uniform as by Congressmen, and Mr. Ordinary Motorist has to witness them in silence also.

A common practice is to park a police car in the line of heaviest morning traffic beside the police box on Thirteenth street just above Pennsylvania avenue for five minutes or more while waiting for the exact moment to put in a call to the precinct to show the officer is on the job. If the car were driven around the corner onto Pennsylvania avenue it would not interfere at all, but apparently that is too much trouble. Of course similar instances occur constantly. What would happen to Mr. Ordinary Motorist?

Another favorite demonstration of power is to pause for minutes in a police car while the officers therein laugh and chat with a foot officer on the curb. It does not in the least matter that traffic must crowd around, and it seems to be a point of honor not to drive close to the curb.

Everyone has seen police officers violating the speed laws when not chasing a speed violator, both in police cars and when in uniform in private cars.

I have not the courage to sign my name, since I would certainly be "on the spot" if caught going 22½ miles an hour in Rock Creek Park.

MRS. ORDINARY MOTORIST.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While cheering you for your courage in daring to denounce one of our lawmakers for something that has been going on for years, may I add my protest?

On Calvert street, across from the Shoreham Hotel, where I have lived for many years, it is a common sight to find Congressional cars parked in any or all of the three "No Parking" areas which are the entrances to apartment buildings and placed there for the convenience of the people who reside in them. The management has a place cleared in bad weather, but can you get to it? No. Loaded with packages, we have to be let out of our cars in the middle of the street because a Congressional car is parked against the curb between "No Parking" signs.

I who have lived in Washington always should be accustomed to it. I am, but when an article, like the one on the front page of The Post greets me I realize I have been inwardly protesting for years.

I can only helplessly smile, as I do when Mrs. Piltdown says to the clerk in my neighborhood chain store, "I want 10 cents worth of those nice red apples. Give me the biggest ones, I am the wife of Congressman Piltdown of Squeezetown."

ESTHER MADDOX REILY.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Referring to The Post's story headed "Traffic Law Not For Congressmen," let's have more of the same. Why not assign someone to the job of checking up on cars of Congressmen, diplomats and other high officials? By arousing public sentiment let's put a stop to this flaunting of the law by the law-breaking lawmakers.

As to the police officials and the "cops" on the beats, where are their guts? Stress that angle in your stories. As I see it, if the Congressman don't "get" this type of police official, the public should; and I believe the public will if this sort of thing is played up. This might be worked up to the point where it would be appropriate to call upon District residents, through the press, to lend their names to a mass protest. The residents of Washington could have a powerful voice in the affairs of the District if, in some way, they could be aroused to the point of making known their views. It occurs to me that through the medium of the press the people of the District could exercise a very effective vote on local questions.

Perhaps I am "all wet," but 24 years of driving experience convince me that there is no reason whatever why any individual competent to drive a car cannot maintain a safe and sane record. Carelessness and deliberate flounting of the law on the part of irresponsible individuals can be reduced to a minimum here if public opinion can be aroused to the point where police authorities and Congress realize that local residents mean business.

First, let's have enforcement of the traffic laws, without fear or favor. No honest police official, none competent to hold his position, would tolerate the sort of thing described in The Post of February 17. If that is to be the attitude of our law enforcement officials in the matter of traffic regulations, what can we expect of them under any circumstances?

I believe the public of this city does not want that kind of officials. I believe the people of the District would stand solidly behind the man who performs his duty honestly and impartially.

I commend you for what you are doing toward bringing about proper law enforcement here. DRIVER.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The front-page articles by a Post reporter in the issue of February 17 telling how Congressmen defy policemen, and get by with it, when they violate traffic regulations, aroused my ire so that I "saw red." And these are the men who make our laws, the laws necessary for traffic safety, and then treat the traffic officers with contempt, and are protected in so doing by certain District officials.

While the same fear of punishment prevents police disclosure of the names of these Congressional offenders, there is no such reason why the higher-ups who are responsible for this situation should not be exposed and held up at least to public scorn and indignation, if that is all that the people can do to them. PHIL THOMPSON.
Hyattsville, Md., Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Policeman, Policeman, spare that car;
No ticket on it place;
Some legislator from afar
Usurps that civic space.

Policeman, note that special plate
And heed its warning clear;
If you don't want to get the gate,
Just go away from here.

So, Buddy, travel on your beat—
Touch not a single knob;
Your wife and kiddies like to eat,
And you must hold your job!

NONINTERVENTIONIST.
Washington, Feb. 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I think your article entitled "Traffic Laws Not for Congressman" is splendid. I would like to compliment the person who wrote it.

Many times I have driven around downtown for half an hour hunting for a parking space only to see a car marked "Congressional" park in a restricted area.

JOHN MONROE.
Washington, Feb. 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to commend you for your "Traffic Law Not for Congressman" article appearing in The Post of February 17.

I am quite sure we have in Congress a large per cent of able and law-abiding representatives of the people. The pity of it is that they all come under criticism because of the arrogant and despicable acts of a few of their members. Is it not about time for the majority to take action, some measure which will preserve the integrity and respect of the Congress? After all, a Congressman is only one of 130,000,000 of American people and is equally as subject to the laws of every community as is the most lowly citizen. Any Congressman who stoops to break the laws he helps to make is a poor representative to have in office.

Some years ago I was walking through Boston one morning, and I saw a man stumble out of a saloon to sprawl headlong in the street. Instantly a "cop" appeared, yanked the man to his feet and started with him to the nearest call box. A bartender rushed out of the saloon. "Hey!" he shouted to the officer, "you can't arrest that man, he is Representative So-and-So from such-and-such a district!" "I don't care if he is King George!" replied the cop. "He is drunk and is going along with me!"

The mis-Representative went along.

Later on I approached some of the voters in Mr. So-and-So's district to find out, if possible, why a man of his type had been elected for high office. I learned that he was a mere nobody, a man without education and only one term as an alderman for political experience. Through crooked politics and the aid of unthinking and ignorant voters he had managed to beat out an honorable man and was sent to the State House in Boston.

Mr. Roosevelt, in one of his speeches, pointed with pride to the "mandate" he received from the people. If the actions of certain Congressmen, sent here to Washington from all parts of the country, prove them to be fair representatives of the mandaters, then Mr. Roosevelt should be anything but proud of his mandate. They only prove again that a large majority vote is never a wise one—it should be either unanimous or close.

Baby In The Park.

OVER four years ago I went through the same park. It was a rainy afternoon of late November. All around the bare trees tossed through the rain like battered whisk brooms.

"You'll find Washington a cold place," my friend said. "The people are not friendly." But neither he nor I had at that time ever taken a baby to the park.

I took her for the first time one Sunday afternoon last summer when the heat became unbearable. The whole city seemed to suffer a dry rot—to give out dust like a puff-ball.

Children and dogs swarmed in the fountain. One little boy lay like dead on the wet pavement around it. A child about 2 years old, her panties looking very dirty and insecure, was going from bench to bench, poking muddy hands in immaculate baby carriages as mothers shied away. We took a distant bench. The baby's face was covered with heat bumps and I did not think we would be very acceptable.

I know now that we were unnecessarily retiring. I could have picked up quite a few remedies.

In fact I have since learned many things about these children. The little girl with the round face, I know now, refuses to eat her green vegetables. Not long ago she made her mother a nervous wreck by dropping her beautiful bowl, spinach and all, nonchalantly on the floor. It smashed.

That powerful boy (born prematurely, though you'd never think it) is, his father assures me, daffy over airplanes, although his park activities seem to be more subterranean, since he spends most of his time poking trash down the park drains.

The child with the golden locks and china blue eyes invariably picks up sticks, is seldom seen without a small tree in her hands. "A naturalist," I venture. Her mother hopes so—hopes she will love the country as much as she does. She never feeds the pigeons, she says, without wishing she were feeding some chickens.

Many of the children do not show up on the cold Sunday mornings of winter. The bums, of course, are always with us. Often a dirty peanut is brought up from the pocket of a shabby coat that seemed to wrap up a gangster and is presented to the baby to present in turn to a squirrel. Once when she ran across the grass far ahead of me a drunk picked her up, and when I said "That's my baby," handed her over to me saying, "Izzat so?" with resigned amazement.

Pigeons whirl about here like papers in a gutter. Dotted among them, like brown raisins, are the sparrows and starlings—all very frowsy with cold. The birds have their devotees, too.

One long-bearded pigeon lover looked like he came from afar. So much so in his coonskin cap and embroidered burlap apron and red oilcloth cloak that the baby was a little alarmed. She made me pick her up and hold her on my arm, and from that protected ledge she watched in silent rapture. The man spread crumbs on his hat and the pigeons clung there. They sat on his shoulders. He seemed particularly magnetic to them, for they came in flocks from all parts of the park. But I suppose it was because he had a very large supply of crumbs and grain in his burlap pockets and leather pouches.

Pigeon feeders have a certain entree here, but are not so freely accepted as those who bring dogs or babies. It is a practical thing to bring a dog or a baby to the park. Pigeon feeders are often inclined to have the air of visionaries and, to the stolid average mind, visions are like seeing snakes.

Certainly most park people like babies. Few pass them by. One little old man even said so. He stopped us and said that they are a nice thing to have around. He was denied parenthood, he said, because he took care of his mother until she died at 80. He was 62. I hastened to assure him that babies have their faults. The lone wolf gives fewer hostages to fortune. Perhaps that is why he doesn't look 62, I told him. He walked part way home with us and went into a dingy rooming house.

Another thing: I find that I am often granted safe conduct (a privilege I never dreamed of attaining) when carrying this magic talisman. Some motorists even wave us across when we don't have the right of way. Thus, those demons who snort and roar like lions when the lone pedestrian dares to cross in front of them are made mild and even forget, for a moment, the relentless haste that besets them.

High Cost of Cheap Cars.

A Brookfield (Mo.) man bought an old car for $10, but is going to sell it at auction because a license for it will cost $10.50 and he figures that it is not worth that heavy an investment. There perhaps are a good many cars on the highway whose cash value is less than the liability insurance their owner ought to carry for the protection of others.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

Galesburg, Ill.

AS CHAIRMAN of the board of the American Distilling Co., a firm whose whisky is doubtless as wholesome and nutritious as any, Mr. Gene Tunney has raised an interesting question. Mr. Tunney's statement of policy on accepting his high office declares that the distiller must keep a closer check on his product between the time it leaves the plant and the time it vanishes into the ultimate consumer, or between the vat and the tank. He says, further, that there should be no disposition on the part of the distiller to encourage the consumption of spirits by the youth of the country either through lack of control or through irresponsible advertising.

PEGLER.

Galesburg is a college town, with seven saloons on the town square alone, six of them within a stretch of about 100 yards and all of them on property which formerly belonged to Knox College. The conveyance by which the land passed into other ownership a long time ago contained a stipulation that it should never be used in any phase of the industry which Mr. Tunney now adorns with his distinguished name, but owing to the misplacement of a punctuation mark, or some ambiguity of wording, that "verboten" was overcome.

• • • •

GALESBURG has other saloons, too, and although there are no really pretty ones to compare with the dream saloons of New York and Chicago, where the dashing young scions and glamorous scionesses of the aristocracy do their dramming, the sight of them is a great joy to those who thought for a long time that the good, old-fashioned saloon would never come back.

Soiled and more than a trace tawdry though they be, the row of six saloons nestling in an elbow of the town square of Galesburg, their lights glowing cheerily in the winter night and their cash registers jangling above the laughter of lady customers dimly visible in the shadowy booths, is a monument to an historic moral victory.

Now comes Mr. Tunney, however, to say in effect that the industry which owes its miraculous revival and its present prosperity to its customers, must regulate or ration its whisky and deny it altogether to the young.

Was it for this that the valiant millions, including the youth of the flapper era and after, drank, the brave fight through the bitter years in bathtub gin and needled beer, in mule and shine and liniment? If a veteran of that long campaign enters a saloon on the Galesburg square tonight with his tongue fixed to lap at a pan of pure, golden whisky, distilled from the honest hearts of grain, will he find there the spirit of Mr. Tunney to examine his drinker's license and punch a hole in his ration card?

And are the youth of Knox College, who seem indifferent to the seven saloons on the old school plot, to be challenged as youth was in the dreadful '20s, and thereby set to conniving and bribing to obtain Mr. Tunney's whisky as a matter of principle?

• • • •

IT SEEMS TO ME that Mr. Tunney is guilty of great presumption and that the entire industry of which he is now a member has a faulty attitude. After all, the industry is only the custodian of the sacred right of the people who made their own decision as to the good or evil of whisky. The industry is constantly depreciating whisky in its advertisements and giving comfort to the scattered but dogged foes who argued that it was harmful to the soul and body of man.

If I were writing the advertisements for Mr. Tunney's whisky I should demand for my product the same freedom of expression that is permitted for automobiles and groceries and shoes. I should write, "Whisky makes you feel good and makes you forget your worries" and "Home without whisky ain't no home to me" and "Reach for a bottle instead of a book."

And certainly I would address a direct appeal to the youth of the land, realizing that the youth of today is the manhood and womanhood of tomorrow, and that my old customers, dropping off day by day, require replacements. Should my replacements come up green and unable to take it, or should I prepare them for full customership by encouraging them to drink in their teens? I would arrange with the production department to turn out a young men's and misses' whisky, a little milder than my adult line, and a kiddies' article called whisk-whisk or something like that for little beginners.

What is the matter with these whisky people, anyway? From the way they talk you would think there was something wrong with whisky.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Farmer, Sleep, Thy Cares Are Over.

The American farmer who used to trust to God, the weather and his own efforts is now going to look to Washington, a book of rules and a bunch of committees.

He used to be the man with the hoe but he will now become the boy with the megaphone.

• • • •

The farm control law—the statute nobody understands—has been signed and almost everything now becomes a matter of Government responsibility from the care of baby chicks up to and including the problem of what to do about potato-bugs.

Nothing is said in the law about the co-ordinating of the Federal Government with a setting hen or just what department should be telephoned to in the case of a cow that stops giving milk, but that will be attended to before long.

• • • •

If a farmer can still manage to get stuck with all the aid the Government will now give him, he can always get a job as a magician, as it will be one of the hardest of all tricks.

It has been estimated that it will take 100,000 local committees, 3,000 county committees, 48 State boards and countless review and appeal boards, as well as most everybody in Washington, to protect the farmers from wrong guesses, unsatisfactory weather, bugs, crows, blights and city picnickers.

• • • •

You used to know that you would always find the farmer down in the cornfield but you will now find him in the committee room.

The old farmhouse that used to be full of boots, galluses, bird dogs, almanacs, seed catalogues, apple pies and implicit faith in Providence will now be stacked high with regulations, rulings, appeals and data on committee hearings.

It is doubtful if a farmer will find time from now on to get outdoors much and see how the crops are coming along.

Statistics will now play such a big part in American farming that a farmer will lead about the same sort of life as a statistician in a big insurance office.

If you see one with a sunburn you will know he's either a Tory or an old-fashioned agriculturist who is too independent to want any outside interference.

• • • •

Just where it will all lead is anybody's guess but the time may be near when the cows will be driven home by Federal push-button, when a hen won't lay an egg until it gets the word from Washington, and when a farmer will get a Federal agent to sit up with a sick horse instead of doing it himself.

We haven't read the new law (nor has anybody else) but we understand section 456, paragraph 478 on page 906 tells a farmer how much he can get if he wants to sell part of the farm for a golf course and what the Government thinks is a fair rate for overnight tourists.

Foreign Trade In '37

News Of Anglo-American Trade Negotiations Hailed As Outstanding Development In Year Of Important Gains.

By Lacey C. Zapf.

Assistant Director, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

NINETEEN THIRTY-SEVEN was a banner year for our foreign trade. Not only did our exports increase 35 per cent but our imports showed a gain of 27 per cent. Our total trade abroad was the largest since 1929, reaching almost $6,500,000,000, an increase of 33 per cent over 1936.

While our domestic market experienced some recession, every important foreign market showed a substantial improvement. Thus, with the total national income showing a gain of approximately 10 per cent in 1937 over 1936, reaching $70,000,000,000, the contribution of our foreign business to this increase appears at a rate relatively three times as great as the contribution of our domestic business. Nothing could prove more graphically the value of a substantial back-log of foreign business in time of adversity at home. It has been estimated that approximately a third more jobs have been provided, directly or indirectly, to American workmen through foreign trade in 1937 than in 1936.

Labor Stimulated By Export Production.

OUR EXPORTS helped labor because 76 per cent of them were goods on which some amount of work had been done, 55 per cent being finished manufactures. They helped the farmer because not only were 24 per cent crude materials or crude foodstuffs, but much of the finished goods were made from raw products of our farms, mines or forests. They helped our industries to maintain low production costs by adding to sales volume, for in many of our key industries 10 per cent or more of all the goods produced were exported and in some industries this proportion rose to as much as two-thirds of the total produced being sold abroad.

Among the leading exports of manufactured goods were machinery, petroleum and products, automobiles, iron and steel, mill and advanced products, chemicals and related products, cotton manufactures and packing-house products. The partly manufactured goods consisted of ginned cotton, unmanufactured tobacco, refined copper and sawmill products, while the principal raw materials were fruits and nuts, petroleum and coal and coke.

Over two-thirds of our purchases abroad were crude or semi-manufactured materials for our industries of foodstuffs, many of which were brought in because of shortage due to the 1936 drought in this country.

These imported products were mostly those that we canont raise or produce in sufficient quantities in this country, such as crude rubber, coffee, newsprint, paper base stocks, raw silk, tin, chemicals and related products, wool, furs, hides and skins, fruits and nuts and grain. About a third of our imports were finished manufactures, including foodstuffs and beverages, such as wines and spirits, meat and meat products, fish and fertilizer. Copper ore imports gave employment to workmen in our refineries, and certain types of tobacco were imported for mixtures.

While we shipped abroad $261,000,000 more in merchandise than we brought in, we imported $1,631,000,000 worth of gold. This was to pay for our excess of exports but represented, in addition, a considerable movement of capital to this country from abroad.

British Trade Pact Plan Said Significant.

THERE WERE many outstanding foreign-trade developments of the year, many of them likely to influence future trade trends. An announcement of negotiations of an Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement was by far the most significant of these. We did 17 per cent of our export business with the United Kingdom and her colonies last year and any lowering of trade barriers shall result in millions of dollars of increased trade.

The favorable showing made by our exports to France since the trade agreement with that country became effective on June 16, 1936, cannot be accepted without qualification as reflecting the value of the concessions obtained. However, even if generous allowance is made for the probable influence of other factors, enough remains to indicate clearly that the agreement has yielded definite and important benefits.

If the statistics covering our trade with France during the year following the conclusion of the trade agreement are compared with those for the year immediately preceding, the results are striking. French imports from the United States of commodities for which specific concessions were obtained show an increase of $2,000,000 in round numbers, or more than 7 per cent. In contrast, imports of the same commodities into France from other countries declined by an approximately equal percentage, and this net improvement took place despite declines in the case of a number of important American products covered by the agreement for which increases were anticipated—notably apples and pears—our exports of which to France fell approximately $1,000,000.

Thus, during a period when its competitors were definitely losing ground, the United States found it possible materially to improve both its relative position in the French market and the total of its trade. Since this sharp difference between the trend of imports from the United States and from other countries does not appear in products for which the French trade agreement did not provide concessions, and as in this latter group imports from both sources show a similar downward movement, the beneficial effect of the concessions obtained does not appear open to question.

The most-favored-nation provisions of the French trade agreement are such that no commercial advantage of any sort can now be granted by France to any country unless its benefit is simultaneously extended to the United States. While it is even more difficult to estimate the importance of these general provisions than that of the specific concessions, in the long run it will probably be found to be at least equal to the latter.

The signing of a commercial agreement with Italy during December gave a background for our commercial relations that should tend to facilitate trade this year. Recent action by the Australian government removed discriminations against our trade which prevented the extension of mutual most-favored-nation reductions in the tariff rates of both countries.

Reciprocity Credited With Much Of Improvement.

ANY FURTHER improvement will bring our total foreign trade closer to that of 1929 than that of 1930. While 1937 prices were higher and, consequently, volume will not approach the same level as that of 1930, nevertheless, we have witnessed a remarkable recovery in our foreign commercial relations, due partly to the successful working of the existing reciprocal trade agreements.

This recovery in our foreign trade has contributed greatly toward the recovery of world trade. This is due to the unconditional interpretation of the most-favored-nation clause, not only in our treaties, but in the treaties of the other parties to these agreements with third countries. The benefits of increased trade have thus spread throughout the world, bringing renewed prosperity even under trying political conditions in some areas. As this movement gains impetus with the early conclusion of the immensely important agreement with the United Kingdom and her colonies, a great step toward peace will undoubtedly have been achieved.

In addition to the trade agreements, other factors have had an effect upon our foreign trade in 1937 and will no doubt continue to operate during 1938. As is usually true when domestic business falls off, many industries during 1937 turned toward foreign markets with renewed energy.

In many respects 1937 has been like 1931, when a similar recession at home was followed by an increased activity abroad in 1922 and the years that followed. Our foreign trade today, however, differs from the foreign trade of the immediate post-war period in many important respects. Outstanding among these is the fact that we are today exchanging goods for goods and not selling abroad greatly in excess of our purchases, receiving payment out of the proceeds of our foreign loans.

Our foreign trade today, while approaching in value the figures of 1930, is essentially more sound than that of 1929 or 1930, with few of the elements that led to the boom and collapse of 1929.

Our balance sheet as a nation is decidedly more healthy this year than it has been for many years. The merchandise items loom larger in our balance of payments and the movement of capital is relatively smaller. We are building up stable and enduring markets abroad for the products of our farms and factories, and these are being paid for by increasing quantities of imported raw materials. Nineteen hundred thirty-eight should see a continuation of this trend.

Seismic Tremor

By Barnet Nover.

Europe And The Austrian Crisis.

THE CRUMBLING of Austria's independence in the face of Nazi pressure is in the nature of a seismic disturbance of vast proportions. In a day or a week or a month, Europe may recover from the immediate shock of that event and subside, once more, into uneasy quiescence. But it may take years before the full import of Dr. Schuschnigg's ill-fated interview with Hitler on February 12 and the developments that followed can be understood.

This will be true whether the faint hope now entertained in some quarters that Austria may yet reconstitute its shattered defenses and continue at least a precarious hold on its sovereignty is borne out or not. For already the Austrian crisis has profoundly modified the entire aspect of the European landscape.

• • • •

THERE IS NOT a nation in Europe which can view Hitler's latest coup de force with any measure of indifference. It affects them all, in greater or lesser measure, and, on the whole, it affects them most unpleasantly.

If Germany is the only gainer by Austria's capitulation, Austria is by no means the only loser.

There is Italy, which finds itself on the losing end of the Berlin-Rome axis, outplayed and outsmarted by its partner and in a very real sense endangered. There is Czechoslovakia, where Nazi pressures, never very gentle during recent months, are now certain to be intensified. And the revelation of British and French unwillingness to preserve the status quo in central Europe will certainly not inhibit the Third Reich from once again employing military threats to achieve its ambitions at the expense of the last surviving democracy east of the Rhine. And there is Hungary, which, as soon as the process of "cold Anschluss" is completed, will lie directly in the path of the Nazi steam roller.

• • • •

HUNGARY may get some satisfaction out of the discomfiture of Czechoslovakia and France. But this satisfaction is certain to be limited.

Hungary was never a happy partner of Austria's in the old days of the Hapsburg monarchy. Its position on the flank of an enlarged and ruthless Germany is certain to be most uncomfortable. For no one expects that Hitler's appetite will be satisfied with the Austrian morsel.

From an economic point of view Austria's value is negligible. Its importance to Hitler, aside from the psychological significance of having put his homeland under his direct rule and the military value of adding 7,000,000 people to the population of the Third Reich, lies as the gateway to the Danube. And, first of all, Austria is the gateway to Hungary.

• • • •

BUT HOW ABOUT the western powers, Great Britain and France? The French are very distinctly disturbed by the latest Austrian developments and well they might be.

Austria's capitulation means the smashing of one of France's major European policies. And the fact that France found itself utterly unable to prevent it is certain to weaken her prestige with her allies of the Little Entente.

It is much too early to rush to any conclusion that Austro-German Anschluss in the limited form it may take for the time being will in and of itself destroy the combination of Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Rumania. However great the German pull on the Bucharest and Belgrade governments may now be—it has been very considerable during the past few years—there are reasons to believe it may not be sufficient completely to disrupt the Little Entente. For each one of the members of this group has nothing to gain and much to lose by any further upset in the status quo.

• • • •

IN GREAT BRITAIN, Austria's capitulation was at first accepted as a normal and inevitable development despite the fact that on at least four occasions in the past the British government has declared itself interested in the maintenance of Austrian independence.

Indeed, the official British attitude was not without its element of discreet satisfaction over Italy's discomfiture. The impression in London now is that Mussolini will be more amenable to a resonable settlement of Italo-British differences than he was in the past.

The British attitude has something to recommend it if only a short-range point of view is taken into account and it is the nature of British statesmanship today to consider only the short-range consequences of any policy. But the long-range results of what is happening in Autsria may not be very much to Britain's liking. For no European system which is forever at the mercy of brute force can really be to the best interest of Great Britain or any other peaceul nation.

In this particular Britain's second thoughts are better than her first. After two days of apparent indifference to Austrian developments, the London government has bestirred itself at least to the extent of giving Hitler formal notice that Great Britain is interested in the maintenance of Austria's independence. This may not be enough to stem the tide sweeping over Austria. Anyway, it may be too late.

That remains to be seen. The German thrust in the direction of Austria may yet galvanize those powers that want peace preserved, but are not prepared to see it preserved through indefinite concessions to the dictators, to join forces. They still have the strength to dominate. But strength that is not used is meaningless.

The Spy Business

By A. G. West

EACH NATION KNOWS that its plans of defense and its secret inventions for war making will eventually become known to rival powers; just as in time their secrets, too, will become known. Mr. William J. Makin apparently is no stranger to the various methods of espionage, counter espionage and infiltration employed by nations in guarding their own secrets and acquiring those of others. Anyway he has written a comprehensive work on the international spy.

Curiously enough Mr. Makin says nothing about the system until recently prevalent among certain groups of friendly nations of trading valuable secrets among themselves. The most notable example of this was the unprecedented swapping that went on among the Allies after the World War and which ended when Britain at last decided to "tighten up." However, Mr. Makin points out quite truly that today the destiny of a nation determined to a great extent on what its secret agents, working in obscurity in far corners of the earth, are able to find out. From these agents often come the most valuable clues to new scientific discoveries, the knowledge of which might well mean the difference between peace and war or the difference between victory and vanquishment in war.

A notable instance is the recent developments in anti-aircraft defense mentioned in chapter six. The most promising of these appears to be an invention by Dr. Max Gerlich, a German engineer who lives on the coast of Denmark, in a castle on the island of Funer. This inventor, according to Mr. Makin, has invented a new type of rifle with a specially tapered barrel. It has a secret explosive propellant that forces out a new "Hagar-Ultra" bullet at remarkable speed, estimated by Mr. Makin, to be nearly 4,000 m.p.h. or 5,800 feet per second as it leaves the muzzle.

However, those of us who believe that England has as great cause to be grateful to Lawrence for his work on small, fast torpedo boats in post-war days as she ever had for his heroic endeavors in the deserts of Arabia will not agree with Mr. Makin that Lawrence had "nothing left that he could do because he believed in nothing."

Many of us feel, as evidently did that girl in the wind-swept field in Dorset near the downs, that "Lawrence is still alive." Pilgrims find their way to the little fenced-off plot in the churchyard of Moreton. The spot is but a mile or so from the scene of that accident in which this hero was fatally hurt. Makin himself suggests that "if Lawrence is dead, his soul goes marching on."

Tom McCarthy

Portrait Of An Affable Gentleman.

HE'S neither a barfly nor a lobbyist. He's somewhere in between. He's simply Eddie . . . and, possibly, he's the king's jester.

Nobody knows just where he lives. Nobody is exactly sure what he does for a living. His past is a matter of conjecture.

McCARTHY.

Some say that he was in the diplomatic service, and other rumors hold that he was merely a ward heeler. Whatever he was, he remains the prime "double-talker" of Washington.

Actually, he's not unique. You can find his prototype in the State capitals, but you won't find any that are cleverer than Eddie. He's seen . . . and heard . . . if not understood.

He hangs out in the lobby of such hotels as the Mayflower. Reporters know him, and the crown princes of politics know him.

"There's Eddie," they say, "lets bring him in and give him a drink."

But Eddie has his value . . . and his pride. He serves a purpose. The correspondent from a New England paper drifts by him in the lobby. Eddie adjusts his pince nez, makes a little gesture toward his hat, and calls out the reporter's name.

"The boss . . . in town," he'll say. Or maybe it'll be even less mysterious.

"The Governor . . . 616," he says, and turns away.

Eddie is a Washington type. State capitals have his like. But he flourishes best in the lush atmosphere of the local hotel lobbies. He's always in the best hotels, but never lives in them. No one is quite sure where he lives. He is simply an ornament of the best hotels.

His clothes are a becoming gray. He wears pince nez glasses. He has a soft, cultured voice, touched up with a bit of Irishry, and he's the most affable man in the world. That's why the bosses, and the Governors, and the Mayors like Eddie.

• • • •

THEY KNOW him by sight. And they know he's affable. They sometimes advance him a loan.

He on the other hand knows the political background of their States. He knows their difficulties . . . and since everybody knows Eddie he can arrange interviews. He's a strange and valuable man.

Probably his prime charm rests in his ability to "double talk." Eddie has no near rival as a "double-talker." The bosses, and the Governors, and the Senators, and lobbyists, like him for that.

He is a yes man . . . but not obviously. That's part of his charm. They like to drink with Eddie. He never uses a verb. And possibly that's why Eddie keeps a nicely pressed suit, and lives . . . though nobody knows exactly where.

Listening to Eddie, while he is seated with a visiting Governor, or Mayor, is fascination itself. He never uses a verb.

"The trouble is," the Governor may say, "that the labor unions are overstepping the bounds of common decency. After all, a man has a right to strike, but men also have a right to work."

The Governor having delivered himself, settles back in his chair, mildly pleased at the utterance of what he considers a patriotic statement. That's where Eddie comes into the picture.

"Oh, yes," he says, and he always begins with an "oh, yes." "Strikes," he says, shaking his head. "Strikes . . . unions . . . and the workingman," he says shaking his head. And the politicos settle back more comfortably in the glow of his words of approval.

Part of Eddie's charm lies in the fact that he never gets in an argument. He may have spent the afternoon chatting with a munition's salesman, but when in the evening he finds himself in the cocktail lounge with a crusader against the war-makers, he handles himself with equal ease.

"We've got to keep an eye on those fellows," the Senator may say. And Eddie's reply is always the same.

"Oh, yes," Eddie says, "war-makers, . . . munition makers . . . investigations . . . guns . . . planes." He shakes his head.

• • • •

HE COVERS the field. He implies approval. He shows interest . . . and understanding. But he never uses a verb . . . or commits himself. He can even talk about sports though it is reliably known that he hasn't exercised in 20 years.

"Horses," says Eddie, "jumping . . . running . . . grace . . . beauty . . . sport." He may accompany his recitation with a slight nod of the head, or a raised eyebrow.

Eddie is probably the best conversationalist in Washington, by all odds. He has never been known to have a quarrel. He can sit down with the C. I. O. in the afternoon, and attach himself to a Tom Girdler in the evening. Never, does he betray himself.

"Oh, yes," he says, "strikes . . . contracts . . . laboring men . . . men . . . capital." And he shakes his head. And the same words give a glow of satisfaction to his hosts, whether they be left-wingers or one of the 60 families.

I asked him about some information, on himself, and he buttoned his Chesterfield closely around him.

"Columnists . . . write-ups . . . information . . . papers . . ." and he shook his head with as close to a disapproving gesture as he has ever used.

His only legitimate contact with newspapers, as he figures it, is when he stands in the lobby of the Mayflower and spots a passing reporter.

On those occasions he acts as an unbidden herald, and announces, "Boston paper . . . hello . . . the Mayor . . . upstairs . . . 616."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Friday Morning Music Club presents Arthur Kraft, tenor (Helen Neilly, accompanist) in a song recital in Barker Hall. Program: "So oft ich meine Tabakspfeife" (Bach), Mary of Argyle (Nelson), Verborgenheit (Wolf), Fussreise (Wolf), Schafers Sonntagslied (Hanson), Waldeinsamkeit (Reger), Extase (Duparc), La Procession ((Franck), Evening Song (White), Long Ago (Hyde), Silent Noon (Williams), the Fisher's Widow (Edwards).

Members and guests of the Friday Morning Music Club heard yesterday a highly enjoyable recital by Arthur Kraft, the distinguished American tenor. Both in content and in presentation his program was one to be savored for its musician-like taste. In the choice of songs, consideration was given to the possible preference of auditors for familiar airs as well as to the singer's own championship of our native composers. Thus it came about that "Mary of Argyll," awakening nostalgic memories, had a place beside songs still in manuscript from the pens of Howard Hanson and Paul White.

Mr. Kraft began his recital with one of the few secular songs by Bach, the delightful "So oft ich meine Tabakspfeife," in which the evanescence of human life is compared to the drifting smoke that leaves naught but ashes in the bowl of the smoker's pipe. From the store of Hugo Wolf's lyrics he drew "Verborgenheit" and "Fussreise," two gems of poetic radiance, and further exemplified the school of lieder with Max Reger's "Waldeinsamkeit."

French composers were represented by Henri Duparc's "Extase" and the moving "La Procession" of Cesar Franck. The turn of American writers came in Hanson's folk-like "Schafers Sonntagslied," White's "Evening Song," a curiously harmonized setting of "Come unto these yellow sands;" Herbert Hyde's "Long Ago," Williams' "Silent Noon," and Edwards' "The Fisher's Widow."

Mr. Kraft's tone production has the perfection of practiced artistry in placement, attack and control, while his phrasing is always rhythmically sure. His crisp diction is not the least of his virtues as a persuasive enterpreter of song. To speak of Helen Neilly only as a skillful accompanist would not do justice to her genuine collabortion, particularly in the Wolf lieder. She has an instinct for the proper balance between voice and instrument.

Play 4,000 Years Old to Raise Fund For China Relief

The legends of ancient China will be used to aid the war sufferers of modern China tomorrow when Washington's 800 Chinese and their American friends attend a huge benefit performance at the Rialto Theater from 2 o'clock in the afternoon until after 6.

The author of the play has been forgotten, for he wrote it more than 4,000 years ago. On the stage the 40 members of the Chinese National Theater, of New York, who have contributed services, scenery and costumes, will present an ancient production which first was enacted when the Chinese gave the theater to the world back in the mists of time.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, will speak.

Every Chinese place of business in the District will be closed during the play. Prices will range from $5 downward.

Nazi Austria Relieves War Peril, Envoy Holds

Knoxville, Tenn., Feb. 18 (AP).—Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, German Ambassador to the United States, declared today that extension of Nazi influence in Austria was inspired by the Austrian people themselves and not by Chancellor Adolph Dieckhoff, here to inspect the Tennessee Valley Authority's Norris Dam and model town of Norris, said consolidation of German influence in Austria would relieve Europe's Hitler.

Text of Statement on Prices

Text of the statement regarding the Administration's price policies which President Roosevelt read to his press conference yesterday follows:

"This Administration has from the beginning pursued a policy designed to promote full employment of our human and material resources. That continues to be our policy. The productive power of our workers and our resources, if fully utilized, can provide and maintain a national income far above any levels we have yet reached.

"An important factor that determines whether we shall succeed or be blocked in our endeavor to attain full employment and a high level of income is the behavior of prices. In this connection careful attention must be given to (1) the relations of the prices of various groups of commodities to each other; (2) the relations between commodity price levels and the levels of debt burdens and costs; (3) the direction and rate of movement of the general price level. To further its broad objective the Administration has, therefore, in its agricultural, industrial and monetary programs necessarily been concerned both with the relation of the prices of groups of specific commodities to each other and with the movement of the general price level.

"The measures employed at any given time to further this policy must fit the needs of that time. A year ago there was ground for concern that a too rapid rise in the prices of some commodities was encouraging a speculative boom. During the past six months, on the other hand, the general price level and industrial activity have been declining. Government policy must be directed to reversing this deflationary trend.

"This does not mean that all prices should advance, nor that the rise should be rapid. Prices of different groups of products must be brought into balanced relations to one another. Some prices and some costs are still too high to promote that balanced relationship between prices that is necessary for sustained recovery. Continued high prices of many of the commodities not subject to highly competitive market forces intensifies the downward pressure on all other prices. Those industries that have maintained prices and curtailed output should seek the restoration of profits through increased rather than through restricted output.

"The prices of some items are still at the highest levels reached in 1937; some are even higher than in 1929. When high prices sharply curtail sales there is real danger. This is shown by our recent experience with housing. A year ago there was a serious shortage. We had unused productive resources ample to overcome the shortage. Yet all the major elements in housing costs advanced so sharply by the spring of 1937 as to kill a promising expansion of activity in an industry whose restoration is vital to continued recovery.

"For industries, such as agriculture, that operate at a high level of capacity even when business activity is at low levels, the restoration of profits must come primarily through higher prices. Higher prices in such industries and increased output in other industries will, by increasing profits, encourage new investment in replacement and expansion of equipment. This is necessary to full recovery.

"The average family will benefit from the business recovery which a balanced price structure will foster. Increased employment and more continuous income should much more than offset any increase in the cost of living. Recently wholesale prices have declined markedly, yet that decline has been reflected in the cost of living only to a very slight degree. A moderate rise in wholesale prices at this time should only slightly affect living costs. Incomes of most families will increase, while the cost of what the housewife buys should show little change. The average family will enjoy a higher standard of living.

"It is clear that in the present situation a moderate rise in the general price level is desirable, and that this rise need not and should not extend to all prices. The rise should take place in and must be mainly confined to classes of commodities whose prices are too low. These include most of those raw materials and finished products which are produced and sold under highly competitive conditions. Such rise must not be so sharp nor continue so long as to lead to a repetition of the unhealthy speculative conditions of a year ago. That sharp rise in prices encouraged speculative inventory buying which, combined with the decline in housing construction, laid much of the ground for the present recession. We must do everything we can to prevent this from happening again.

"Our program seeks a balanced system of prices such as will promote a balanced expansion in production. Our goal is a constantly increasing national income through increasing production and employment. This is the way to increase the real income of consumers.

"This is not a policy of restriction; it is a policy of abundance.

"Our agricultural, industrial, housing and monetary programs have been and will be directed toward this end."

Roosevelt Visit Delays Jefferson Shrine Plan

A final decision on the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission's new plan will not be reached before the latter part of next week, Representative Boylan (Democrat), New York, the chairman, stated yesterday.

Boylan had planned to call on President Roosevelt today with a delegation from the commission to explain the new design, but he was informed that Mr. Roosevelt was preparing to leave for Hyde Park.

Cotton Exchange Head Sees Peonage in South

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 18.—Harris Kempner, president of the Galveston (Tex.) Cotton Exchange, told the National Farm Institute today that the Smoot-Hawley tariff was driving the South into peonage and the rest of the Nation into ruin.

The tariff policy, he said, must be changed and our only salvation must come from increased buying power of our foreign customers.

Reformation Pastor to Talk On 'Influences'

'How to Cure Worry' Set as Dr. Blackwelder's Evening Topic.

"What Influences Your Life?" is the theme to be used by Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor of the Church of the Reformation, tomorrow at the 11 o'clock service. The chorus choir, under direction of Miss Mary A. Weidley, will sing "More Love to Thee, O Christ," by William Reed, and Wilfred Merlich will render a bass solo.

At the 8 o'clock evening service Dr. Blackwelder will give his second talk on "How to Cure Worry." The chorus choir will sing "Peace, Perfect Peace" and "The Inner Light," by Alfred M. Greenfield. Words to this anthem were written by Miss Harriet W. Pierson, a member of the congregation.

Grace. At the 11 a. m. service the pastor, Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski, will preach on "Some Fell on Good Ground." Special music will be rendered by the choir.

Concordia. The Rev. Armin Meyer, missionary of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to India, will speak at Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church in both the German service at 10 a. m. tomorrow and the English service at 11:15 a. m.

St. Paul's. Dr. Henry W. Snyder, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "The Church Imperfect." At the evening service the Rev. Harry P. Dunlap, guest speaker, will use as the topic of his discourse "Life, a Patch."

Georgetown. "Hidden in the Heart" will be the Rev. Harold E. Beatty's sermon subject tomorrow morning.

St. Mark's. "Are We Civilized?" will be the theme of the sermon by the Rev. J. Luther Frantz, pastor, at the 11 a. m. service.

St. Stephen's Evangelical. At the 11 a. m. service the Rev. Sam H. Kornmann, pastor, will have as his sermon theme "The Parable of the Sower."

Augustana. At the morning worship service the pastor, Dr. Arthur O. Hjelm, will preach on "The World's Greatest Need." The following newly elected deacons also will be installed: Carl H. Gustafson, Edwin Abrahamson, N. G. Anderson, Wilbur Nelson and B. I. Mattson.

Christ. In the 11 o'colck service the pastor, the Rev. J. Frederic Wenchel, will speak on "Is It Important What You Hear?"

Christ, Bethesda. The Rev. Henry J. Whiting, pastor, will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Growth of an Ideal."

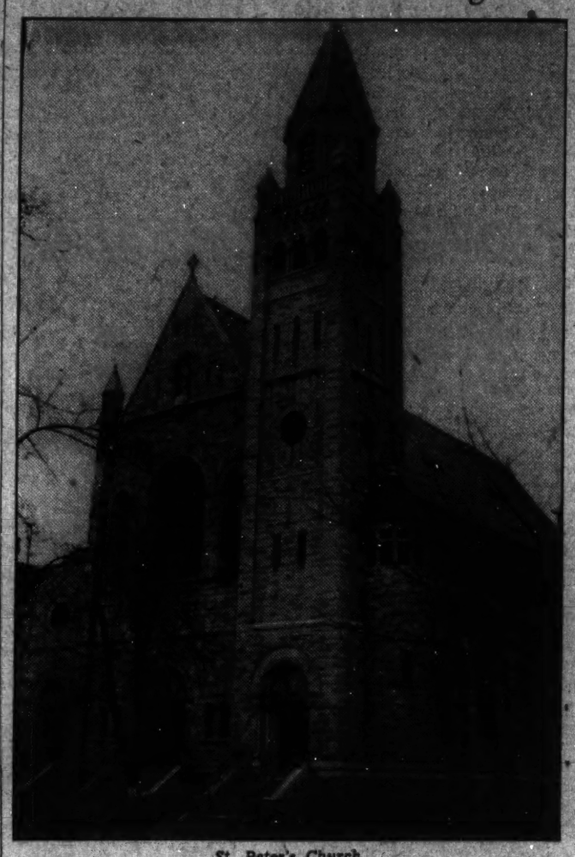
Historic Churches of Washington



St. Peter's Church.

Original St. Peter's Church One of Oldest in Washington

When St. Peter's Church was founded in 1820 it was the only Roman Catholic parish within Washington's limits besides St. Patrick's. The original building, of simple red brick with a shingled roof, was erected by means of a fund to which 220 persons subscribed.

The present white marble building, on the original site at Second and C streets southeast, houses a membership of over 5,000. It was dedicated in 1891, three years after its predecessor was torn down.

The new church has seen only two pastors, Monsignor James M. O'Brien served from 1888 until 1922, when he was succeeded by Monsignor E. J. Connelly, the present pastor.

The present parish originally was part of a vast tract known as Cerne Abbey Manor. Three lots, with a frontage of 125 feet on C street and 85 feet on Second street, were given to the infant parish in 1820 by Daniel Carroll, owner of the land and a cousin of the Charles Carroll who signed the Declaration of Independence.

The parish property expanded gradually. A cemetery, established on the C street front, was discontinued in favor of a larger site. The first pastor, the Rev. James F. Lucas, lodged in a rooming house at Second and D streets, which later was used as an academy for the Sisters of Charity and now is the site of Providence Hospital. Later a residence for the parish priests was built on the church grounds.

St. Peter's School, which now has an enrollment of 564 children in its eight grades, was built in 1867, during the pastorate of the Rev. Francis E. Boyle. The building was remodeled in 1923 and an addition erected two years ago.

Monsignor Connelly is assisted in his pastoral duties by the Rev. Paul L. Norris, the Rev. Charles W. Nelson and the Rev. Francis E. Sullivan.

Friendship and Membership

Pastor, Trinity M. E. Church.

Friendship and membership have two implications, namely privileges and responsibilities. Fellowship with Christ and membership in the church are likewise based on these two requisites. There is a law of the spiritual, as well as of the physical realm, which we dare not evade for God is not mocked.

Christ calls us His friends, and claims headship in the church. This relation is unlike that of others, in that, from Himself there continually and perpetually flows a stream of divine life and energy into those who deliberately unite themselves unto him. This divine life and energy is the agent through which He fulfills all His promises and accomplishes all His purposes. He pledges us immediate access to Himself. He confers upon us a most intimate relationship. He provides us with all good and guards us against all evil. He counsels us with all wisdom, and assures us of unqualified victories. By His cross He grants us full forgiveness and complete restoration; by His life and energy, these and more are secured for us, and become our high privileges.

What then is our responsibility? In essence, it is to keep clear and clean the channel of our lives for the unhindered in-flow of that divine life and energy which is ever proceeding from the Father. It is reasonable to assume that the Father is as eager to express Himself through His children as He was through His only begotten Son.

By selfishness and sensuality, by pride and greed, we are continually intercepting this inflow. On the other hand, by purity and cleanliness, by love and generosity, we are ever accelerating it. This is, in essence, the law of the spirit, of which Paul speaks.

We may therefore see an analogy in the law of electricity. If by touching the two wires together, we turn the current of electricity in upon itself, we blow a fuse, and are plunged into darkness; but when we permit the current to flow unvexed, it not only illuminates us but gives light to all in the house. Just so, the self-centered life is the energy turned in upon itself, producing darkness; whereas our generous impulse floods our hearts with light and communicates itself, plus God, into others. What we give of ourselves or of our goods, is raised to infinity by the law of divine energy within us.

"That we may be partakers of the divine nature," says Peter. This represents the in-flow, and is our high privilege, and the apostle hastens to add, "that ye may be neither barren nor unfruitful;" this is the outflow and our responsibility.

John speaks of "a pure river of water of life, and in the midst of it the Tree of Life, and its 12 manner of fruits. Strange that there should be a tree in the midst of a river. Nevertheless the truth holds that the Tree of Life is for him through whom the river flows, and its 12 manner of fruits are for those to whom it flows.

Life would be a joy and a blessing if we would accept our privileges and discharge our responsibilities.

Emory Methodist to Observe Annual World Friendship Day

The annual observance of world friendship day will be held at Emory Methodist Church tomorrow. Mrs. Walter C. Loudermilk, for years a resident of China, will speak at 11 o'clock on "The China of Today." Mrs. Loudermilk's personal acquaintance with the most of the leaders of modern China will give added interest to her presentation. Special interest will be found in her interpretation of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek.

Francis Asbury M. E. South. The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, pastor, will speak at both services tomorrow. At the 11 o'clock service his subject will be "How Long Shall I Bear With You?" At 8 o'clock his theme will be "Art Thou He that Should Come?"

Calvary South. The pastor, the Rev. W. D. Keene, will preach at the 11 o'clock service on "The Gospel of the Jubilee." At 8 o'clock the pastor continues his sermons on Old Testament characters. The character this Sunday evening is "Joshua, Worthy Successor of a Great National Leader."

Epworth M. E. Church South. Dr. G. G. Martin will preach at the 11 o'clock service tomorrow morning, taking as his sermon subject "The Church and the Master Spirits of the Age." For the evening service, Dr. Martin will preach on "Making Life a Masterpiece."

Maryland Women Will Hold Retreat Day Tomorrow

Women of St. Matthew's and St. Michael's (Silver Spring, Md.), will have a day of recollection tomorrow at the Washington Retreat House, 4000 Harewood road northeast.

Mrs. P. F. Hannan, team captain for St. Matthew's Church in the Washington Retreat League, has the following lieutenants assisting her: Miss Katherine Burke, Miss Date Daley, Miss Sara O'Neill, Miss Maude R. Cavanaugh, Mrs. J. W. Craighton, Mrs. Daniel Malarkey, Mrs. George Fisher and Miss Mary Hannon.

For St. Michael's, Mrs. George Young, the team captain, has a committee of the following to make arrangements: Mrs. L. A. Alberti, Mrs. E. M. Barry, Mrs. Charles Clifford, Mrs. T. S. Loughery, Mrs. George A. Robinson, Mrs. C. T. Stewart, and Miss Rose Mary Fenwick.

The retreat master for this occasion will be the Rev. Thomas E. O'Connor, S. S., professor of English and public speaking, St. Charles Seminary, Baltimore.

The conference will start at 10:30 a. m. Sunday and conclude with Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament at 7:45.

Congregationalists Will Stage Annual Patriotic Pageant

The annual patriotic pageant will be presented tomorrow at 7:45 p. m. at the First Congregational Church. It is one of the series of patriotic Sunday evening services for February, and is entitled, "The Parade of the States." One hundred and fifty persons will be in the cast; the authentic State flags will be among the properties used, and at the pageant's climax a mammoth electrical flag will be illuminated.

A section has been reserved for members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Mayflower Society, the Sons of the American Revolution, the Children of the American Revolution and the American Coalition.

At the 11 a. m. service, the Rev. Ada Stone Anderson will be the guest preacher. Mrs. Anderson, mother of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, minister of the church, is minister of the Memorial Congregational Church, St. Louis, Mo. Her subject tomorrow is, "The Balanced Life."

Sons of Revolution Will Hold Patriotic Service at Epiphany

The Sons of the Revolution will hold their annual patriotic service at 4 p. m. tomorrow in Epiphany Church. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, will be the special preacher. This service is featured by the massing of the colors, and with special music by the entire Epiphany Choir.

At the 8 p. m. service of evening prayer, the special preacher will be the Very Rev. Albert G. Richards, former dean of the Du Bose Memorial Training School at Monteagle, Tenn.

Tomorrow morning at the Church of the Epiphany, there will be morning prayer, litany and sermon by the Rev. Richard Cartmell.

St. John's. "The Christian Hope" is the subject of Dr. Oliver J. Hart's sermon at 9:30 a. m. This sermon will be repeated at 11 a. m. At both of these services the full choir of men and boys under the direction of Arthur Howes, organist and choirmaster, will sing "The Two Fatherlands," by Holst. Evening prayer will be said at 8 p. m. with sermon by the Rev. White on "Silence In Heaven."

St. Stephen and the Incarnation. The Rev. Raymond L. Wolven, canon of Washington Cathedral and chaplain to the Bishop of Washington, is holding the services at the Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation during the absence of the rector, the Rev. Paul D. Wilbur. Mr. Wilbur, away from Washington on a honeymoon trip, is expected to return in time for the services on Quinquagesima Sunday, February 27.

Saint Luke's. The Rev. J. E. Elliott, rector, will be the celebrant at Holy Communion at 7 a. m. At 11 a. m. morning prayer with sermon by the rector will be held.

Subject: "In Praise of Reverence"
One cannot read the addresses of George Washington to the people of the United States through the medium of Congress without being impressed with the exalted regard in which he and his people held the Diety. Such phrases as the following are common: "The great Lord and Ruler of the Nations;" "That Almighty Being who rules over the universe and presides in the councils of the Nations;" "The great Author of every public and private good;" "The benign Parent of the human race;" "The great and glorious Being who is the beneficent Author of all good that was, that is, and that will be." In reply to one of his addresses Congress said: "We commend you unto the protection of Almighty God." No greater boon could befall this nation in our present time of resting than a real revival of reverence for the Rules of this and all nations.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should Man Remain in Hated Routine Job or Try His Chances in Deeply-Loved Profession?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 23 years of age, and ever since childhood I have had an ambition to teach school. I have always loved children and find great pleasure in being among them in their work and play. In the spring of 1936 I entered a State teachers college in my home State, which is about 750 miles from here; but I was only able to enter with the help of my brothers and the proceeds from an NYA job, which I was fortunate enough to secure.

* * * *

I studied for a year and in the spring of 1937 took practice teaching in the sixth grade. It was the most thrilling experience of my life. I enjoyed every minute I spent with the children and each day hated to see my teaching period come to a close.

* * * *

I started school again last fall but had completed only one month's work when I received a Civil Service appointment here in Washington. I did not want to accept the position but after taking everything into consideration, there seemed no choice but to accept. So I gave up my studies and came to Washington. I have been very unhappy ever since and have no desire whatsoever to engage in any social affairs with persons my own age, which I enjoyed so much at home. I have thought of nothing but school and my frustrated desire to teach.

* * * *

I have an opportunity to return to school next month and complete, in five months, the work required for obtaining my teaching certificate. I stand a very good chance, thereafter, of securing a teaching position next fall in my home town, which has a population of 950 persons. But I am undecided as to whether I should give up my present work for a small-paying teaching job. I only know that there is nothing I want to do so much as teach, and that no other occupation could make my life as happy. What do you think I should do? UNDECIDED.

Principle of Success.

DEAR UNDECIDED: Apparently you haven't the faintest idea of how really fortunate you are in knowing, so early in life, the profession you were born to serve. The unfortunate men and women are those who have no well-defined notion of what they would like to do or are best fitted to do; who flounder around for the best part of their lives, square pegs in round holes, trying to find the niche in which they may function most happily and usefully and, hence most successfully.

* * * *

By all means, follow your natural bent. Rather than wonder whether or not you should return to school and take a chance on finding a teaching position next fall, it seems to me you should embrace this opportunity with the greatest alacrity, giving fervent thanks to whatever gods or stars are responsible for this miraculously lucky break. I am convinced you would not be making any sort of mistake in relinquishing the routine office job; that the greatest mistake you could possibly make would be to continue in it, since it has robbed you of all spontaneous enjoyment of life.

* * * *

As I once heard a very wise woman say, "The life principle never comes to the aid of the timid soul." You may ask, "What is the 'life principle?'". I can only explain it to those who don't intuitively apprehend its existence and workings, who have never successfully employed it in their own affairs, by saying it is the creative force of the universe. It has to do with God, and one's faith alike in God and one's own ability to perform, with immeasurable benefit to one's self and society, an ordained task. It has been said, "Do the thing, and you shall have the power." And all who have ever undertaken a loved task in this spirit of faith, trust, optimism, courage and lofty indifference to material self interest, have found the mysterious "life principle" coming to their aid, crowning their efforts with professional, social and material success.

* * * *

A man I know who stands at the peak of his profession today at barely 40, who, in his own words, "has never asked for a job and never asked for a raise in salary," is a man who knew (as you have known) from the earliest years of his life, the work he wanted to do. All that he has accomplished has been achieved through his own efforts, seemingly, and yet he attributes his professional and financial success to faith (in himself and in a supernatural force); to complete and selfless dedication to a loved task; and to the abiding conviction that success is predicated on complete contentment with one's chosen task. I discussed your problem with this edy is not that he is today a square man and he said: "This boy's tragpeg in a round hole, but that he hasn't the courage to do the thing he wants to do and has the chance to do." He said: "Tell him that success is already within the grasp of the man who knows, beyond the shadow of a doubt, his true vocation." M. H.

Versatile Lace Foremost in Spring Fashions

Paris Designers Harking Back to Stagecoach Days

Paris, (AP).—Paris designers have harked back to stagecoach days for romantic themes to bring glamour to summer fashions of 1938.

New fashion collections have played up redingotes fronted with lace-edged ruffles and postilion hats wound with yard-long veils.

Black tailored suits were bordered with white frills or organdie bands. Bolero jackets were lined with hand-tucked linen to match hand-tucked lingerie blouses. Small capes hugged the shoulders of flower-sprigged frocks.

Evening dresses suggested candlelight nights and the minuet in stiff satins or crinolined organdies with voluminous skirts and rose-wreathed necklines.

Slimmer evening styles echoed the 1880 note in bustle-draped backs and short trains burdened with bows of ribbon or bunches of flowers. Last century fans and reticules were romantic accessories.

The extremely narrow daytime silhouette sometimes was varied by pleated skirts. A striking novelty noted in some fashion houses was the drop in waistlines to the hips marked by draped sashes and suede belts. All skirts were very short. Necks showed a tendency to lower and more open lines.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 18.

A WOMAN'S desire to look her best, or better, is not confined to those citizens who can afford a course of sprouts at the costly beauty saloons along Fifth avenue and adjacent alleys. This thought bloomed in the skull of Mrs. Nancy Hatch, a famed expert in these devious matters, and as a result the first beauty clinic for under-privileged sisters has been launched right here in our own little town!

ALICE HUGHES.

Mrs. Hatch, the thinker-upper, is in active charge of the clinic, which is installed at the Jacob A. Rils Settlement on the East Side's cramped Henry street. Already 35 women of the district are registered, and listening to lectures, and submitting to exercises, massages and cabinet baths—all as effective as the ones Mrs. de Poostervelt gets uptown at fancy prices. In addition, they listen to sound diet advice, and Mrs Hatch tells me she is trying to shatter the eating habits of a lifetime by getting them to nibbling vegetables instead of the rich, starchy grub to which they are accustomed. It will be a dandy trick if she does it. For two hours each Wednesday this goes on, with a medico on hand to discuss the more complicated cases of skin care. Hair-doers and makeup wizards have also volunteered their services.

This strikes me as one of the soundest and most helpful ideas in a long time—provided, of course, that the ladies of the East Side are also fed and sheltered. Though far down the list from the girls' spirits. Or so it seems.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Meeting Sonia Tamara, a clever Russian girl who has chased news in all the world capitals at the home of Lindesay and Marion Parrott, I probed around for her impressions of this village, where she is reporting at present. She impressed me by remarking that American men do not look so long, and ardently, at pretty women as they do in, say, Italy. She says that European women expect and like this ocular gaping. Here, being stared at thus, timorous girls are inclined to look about for a cop. But I take Sonia's notion as a compliment to the women of America, preferring to feel that there are so many lovely creatures here that our men have almost stopped being allergic to gorgeous faces and figgers. Let's stick to that story!

Marjorie Castle fires the following tips from Paris. Red hearts printed on natural linen make a Schiaparelli evening gown. Veils are being worn like masks or muzzles, and not floating on the zephyrs. And baby ribbons are run through beading on extra high-class lingerie!

Lace Strikes Leading Note In All Spring Collections

By Ethel Ehlen.

The Post Fashion Editor.

LACE strikes an important note in all of the spring collections, both in Paris and in the New York markets. For spring lace is a "natural" fabric in this mad trend toward femininity and sentiment. It has been synonymous through the ages with refinement, feminisity, luxury, romance and attractiveness.

Viewing the imports as they arrived in New York from Paris, I was interested in the varying interpretations of lace as a medium for both daytime and evening clothes; all of which will eventually be copied for the American markets. Vionnet's formal evening creation of gossamer black Chantilly, was probably the most sensational—a voluminous skirt bound in black velvet and this trimming repeated in a unique strap arrangement at the top of the bodice. Although classic and typical of Vionnet in lines, a special head-dress of the same lace designed by Agnes, gave the costume a harem-like effect.

Schiaparelli was represented by a sports frock of white string lace; sophisticated in its simplicity and yet in keeping with the feminine trends. Francevramant has designed a characteristic tailored street frock of navy blue and white mixed wool lace, and trimmed it youthfully with white pique. Bruyers, who startled fashion reporters at the recent openings in Paris by his use of Chantilly to trim tailored black frocks, made amends by sending a soft little day suit of sheer blue lace patterned with white daisies. Lelongs simple white dress of richly patterned lace adorned with green glass buttons, and Marcel Dormoy's creation of pale blue Chantilly, were other models liked by the American fashion reporters.

Paquins formal black lace with a bright green ribbon design as the decorative motif, is as interesting in styling as it is in fabric; an unusual off-the-shoulder effect. A petal pink peau d'ange lace evening gown, draped with low decolletage and long slender sleeves is the answer to a costume that is "different." Robert Piquet has designed a frock with the new sweater bodice, a two-piece affair with long sleeves which form mitts over the hands; navy blue heavy lace. A lovely evening dress from Chanel is of white cotton lace outlined with pale red; the long loose bolero is sleeveless and low of decolletage.

Other gowns in this Paris collection which we viewed in New York last week were from Jean Desses, Rosevienne, Lanvin, Molyneux, Balenciaga, Paul Roy, Ira Belline, Maggy Rouff. There was a predominance of white, with black a close second, and the new spring color tones also much in evidence. This entire collection from prominent couturiers, was the highlight of the Lace Promenade and Fashion Show at the Miami-Biltmore Hotel last night. It was the first time the lace imports had been shown to the general public.

Washington's Birthday Brings Traditional Dishes for Parties

By Jean Green.

PARTY dishes for George Washington's birthday follow the traditional pattern and are either quaintly colonial or gaily decorated with stars, stripes and cherries.

For the bridge party, a three layered February fantasy which consists of a layer of cake, a layer of jellied cherries, topped off with a fluff of white whipped cream, is suggested. For the top, garnish the whipped cream gaily with whole maraschino cherries and use as a border around the cake small flags set in whole marshmallows.

Cherry ice creams, cherry macaroons, and even angel cake made with minced maraschino cherries will carry out the red and white color scheme at the party.

Many downtown shops feature individual favors and place cards that will make the party both festive and individual. Often these candy favors can be used as a garnish on the dessert. An icebox cake shaped as a log iced with mocha frosting is made more attractive with a garnish of whole cherry and candy hatchets.

Old Virginia recipes that date back to colonial days are also perfect for bridge lunch parties. Such dishes as pickled oysters, gingerbread, beaten biscuits, Virginia baked ham, ambrosia, and syllabut are all dishes that were enjoyed during pre-Revolutionary days. For this type of menu, have all table decorations dainty and in keeping with the atmosphere of colonial days.

The GENTLER SEX

Day In Bed.

She was marshaling her willpower to throw off the covers when the happy remembrance struck her. She did not have to get up! This was to be her lazy day—her day in bed.

She yawned and snuggled up in her warm retreat. For years she had looked forward to this day. And now it had come. She was going to do what the beauty experts were always advising women to do—what other women were always talking about doing. "I simply spent the whole day in bed," her married friends were always saying. And only yesterday she heard an energetic young business woman exclaim, "One thing certain, if I ever get married, I'm going to rest in bed one whole day every week!"

Yes, it was the thing to do. A woman really owed it to herself. The women who kept their husbands jumping were the ones who took plenty of care of themselves. Men really thought more of you if you were the day-in-bed kind.

* * * *

It was heavenly to stretch out this way and yawn . . . and yawn . . . to know you didn't have to get up and hurry Jack off to the office, the children off to school. She wondered what they were doing down in the country—no, she must not think of that. She must just lie and relax and let everything go blank. Forget the world about her.

She closed her eyes and when she opened them again, it was 8:25. The maid was to bring breakfast at 8:30. Well . . . anyway . . . she would have to wash first. She got up, washed her hands, hastily donned a pink maribou bed jacket she had taken out of its Christmas wrappings and jumped back under the covers just as the maid knocked.

Sitting up among her pillows, she manipulated carefully her soft boiled egg, her jam, her cocoa, keeping a tense eye on her white sheets, on her maribou sleeves. She was relieved when the maid took the tray.

She read the morning newspapers, reached for the book on her bed table. It was one she had been "going to read" for six months. She opened it eagerly, read awhile, then suddenly remembered that she might be getting a double chin. Besides, what one really needed for a day in bed was a French novel.

* * * *

The clock struck 10. She remembered she hadn't called the cleaners to come for Jack's suit. And they were going to dinner Tuesday night. And she ought to mend her lace party dress . . . and the buckle on one of her slippers was a little loose . . . and—No, she would NOT do those things now. She was going to stay ALL day in bed.

She heard the maid downstairs cleaning . . . wondered if the dust would be left again in the curleycues of the what-not. She really ought to go down—NO, this was her day in bed.

She would be served her luncheon at 1, her dinner at 7 . . . no she didn't believe she would have dinner in bed. She would get up after lunch and walk in the park . . . sit on a bench in the sun and meditate. It would be virtually the same thing.

She remembered she hadn't told the maid to make gingerbread for Sunday night supper . . . Jack and the children would be back hungry as wolves. Well, she would see to that later. And there was Gracie's costume for the George Washington's birthday entertainment . . . she should have gotten it started . . . and Buster's shoes should have been taken to be half-soled—oh, there she was at it again. She turned over and determinedly closed her eyes.

* * * *

She heard the clock strike 12 and remembered she had promised to call Jack's sister-in-law who was leaving that night for Florida. Martha was so sensitive . . . and while she was at it she might as well call the members of her club committee about that meeting on Wednesday. Yes, she would get up and telephone and then go back to bed. Still, if she got up . . . she might just as well eat luncheon downstairs . . . and then she could do something about Jack's suit and Buster's shoes and . . . say! If she got up right now she would have time to mend her lace dress and look after the shoe buckle before luncheon. Then this afternoon she could get started on Gracie's George Washington costume and maybe make the gingerbread herself.

With a sudden leap she was out of bed and bound for the bathroom.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

IT'S TO BE another suit spring with hip length coats and fitted waistlines. The tailored simplicity of these smart suits is all to the good if you have a slim waist with hips in proportion.

Bulging hips and a roving waistline, however, were never designed for the 1938 spring styles and it takes emergency measures to perform miracles within 30 days. Of all the exercises, the most effective are those of the rolling type, which massage hips, incorporated, and at the same time twist and stretch the waist, as in the following:

Try Rocking on Floor.

MOVEMENT: Rock from right to left, resting first the right thigh, then buttocks, then the left thigh flat on the floor. Continue for 25 counts, holding the feet in the same position, but rocking vigorously. This exercise will roll off all the bulges along the outer thigh and across the derriere.

POSITION: Sitting on floor, knees bent, feet drawn up close to the body and legs together.

MOVEMENT: Holding the legs together, roll over on the side of one thigh, then roll back so that the other thigh is resting on the floor. Roll 10, later 20 times. This roll smooths out the pin cushion of fat at the sides of the thighs.

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, arms outstretched on the floor above head, knees flexed and feet flat on floor.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the small of the back on the floor and the shoulders relaxed, roll the hips from the waist to bring the side of first one leg and then the other down on the floor.

POSITION: Lying on floor, arms outstretched on floor above head, legs extended downward and held together. Lie on the back.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the upper part of the body relaxed and flat on the floor, twist at the waist and roll the lower part of the body from side to side. Hold the feet together.

ROLLING wears away hip and thigh bulges like nothing else will and it improves these measurements more rapidly than any other type of exercise.

Graciela Trucco Becomes Mme. Illanes-Benitez In Beautiful Ceremony at St. Matthew's Here

Bride's Own Gown Only Simple Note in Church Wedding Attended by Hundreds of Local Society.

With all the pomp and circumstance befitting the wedding of an Ambassador's daughter, Miss Graciela Trucco, whose father is Chilean envoy here, was married yesterday to Fernando Illanes-Benitez, until recently second secretary of the Chilean Embassy.

Silk hats, champagne, calla lilies, velvet gowns (although it was rather a warm day for them) and all the trappings of a smart wedding were features of the nuptials. The only simple not was the attire of the wedding party itself, including the severely beautiful Vionnet model worn by the bride.

Promptly at 4 o'clock the organist at St. Matthew's struck up the wedding march from Lohengrin. Ushers led the procession down the aisle, in customary American fashion, but bowed to customs of Chile by carrying their silk hats to the altar with them. Serving in this capacity were William K. Ryan, Fernando Sacasa, Joao de Deus Ramos, secretary of the Portuguese legation; Sergio Huneeus, First Secretary of the Chilean Embassy; Abelardo Silva, and Manuel Trucco, brother of the bride. Alfonso Grez, Consul General of Chile, in New York, was best man.

Bridesmaids In Turquoise

The bride was escorted down the aisle by her father. Her ensemble was unusual in that there was not a trace of the traditional tulle and satin anywhere. Instead, white angel skin was the material of her gown, which had a high neck, long tight fitting sleeves, and a brief chiffon veil attached to a simple headdress. She carried a sheaf of Easter lilies.

Miss Marta Trucco, a sister, served as maid of honor, and bridesmaids were her other sister, Miss Rebecca Trucco; Mme. Huneeus, and the Misses Olga Patterson, Junia Culbertson, Dolly Corbin and Maruca Sacasa, daughter of a former president of Nicaragua. Their gowns were monastic in effect, made of turquoise blue crepe with cowl necks, hoods, full skirts and silk cords of the same shade about the waist. Each bridesmaid carried a gladioli in a pale peach shade.

The Apostolic Delegate, the Rev. Amleto G. Cicognani, performed the ceremony, assisted by Msgr. Buckey and several acolytes. The altar was banked with masses of white carnations against a background of Easter lilies and ferns. Tall white tapers burning on the altar added to the beauty of the scene. At the end of each pew was a sheaf of calla lilies tied with wide white ribbon.

Reception Attended By Many Officials

The decorative motif of white carnations and Easter lilies was carried out again in the embassy, which was the scene of a reception following the ceremony. These flowers made a striking contrast in the rather somber great hallway, with its dark paneling and hangings of red brocade.

The dining room table, on which a massive white cake reposed, was done entirely in bridal white with the exception of pale green tapers in silver holders. Masses of lilies of the valley, Easter lilies, and white snapdragons formed the centerpiece.

The wedding party received in a small room to the right of the hallway. As soon as the last guest passed through the line, the bride mingled briefly with the assembled company before going upstairs to dress for her wedding trip. As she reached the top of the steps, Mme. Illanes-Benitez turned and threw her bouquet, which was caught by her two sisters.

The health of the couple was toasted in champagne, and there was the elaborate display of food traditional at a smart wedding.

Among hundreds of distinguished guests who went from St. Matthew's Church to the reception were Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, smartly gowned in shimmering black satin, a scarf of silver fox and a small hat trimmed with feathers. Equally chic was Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Netherlands Minister, whose large black hat tied under her chin, was reminiscent of a Boldoni portrait.

Frau Herbert Scholz, in brown satin with a hat of the same shade, came with Frau Herbert Blankenhorn, also of the German Embassy. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke—Mrs. Burke is a Chilean, were glimpsed chatting with Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Siamese Minister. The Attache of the Swiss Legation and Mme. Schlatter were accompanied by the former's mother, Mme. Schlatter-Roll, who is spending several weeks in Washington. Mme. Schlatter is a sister of Miss Olga Patterson, one of the bridesmaids.

Many Notables Among the Guests

The Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp, the Second Secretary of the Belgian Embassy and Mme. Walravens; Laurence Bungardeanu, Marquis Campomazza; the Charge d'Affaires of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron; the Naval Attache of the Italian Embassy and the Marchioness Sant 'Orsola, and the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza were others present from the diplomatic corps.

Other present at the reception were Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dancicos; Baroness von Below; the Misses Helen and Nancy Brereton with the former's fiance, Robert Sweazy; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imforne, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Daniels, Mrs. Harold B. Hinton, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, Mrs. Alan Chantry and her daughter, Miss Caroline Chantry, Mrs. William T. Mann and several hundred more.

Wearing a brown ensemble, with a matching hat, the bride left with her husband last evening for New York, whence they will sail next week for Bermuda. From there they will go to Lima, where he was recently transferred.

Senora Illanes-Benitez is the daughter of the late Senora Trucco, the former Laura Gaete. With her two sisters, she has served as her father's hostess since their arrival, in this country. She was graduated from the Liceo de Ninas in Santiago.

Senor Illanes-Benitez attended the Institute Nacional de Chile and received his degree in law at the Law School of the University of Chile.

Meems Attend Miami Lace Ball

The Misses Ann Carroll and Eleanor Eastbourne Meem, debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, who are now the guests of Mrs. Edward Beale McLean in Florida, accompanied her and her daughter, Miss Evalyn McLean, to the Helen Lee Doherty lace ball in Miami last night.

The event, given for the benefit of the Miami Milk Fund, was attended by a number of Washingtonians who are vacationing in the South. According to present plans, Mrs. McLean, her daughter and the Misses Meem will spend a few days in Miami before motoring back to Palm Beach where Mrs. McLean has leased the Gurnee Munn villa for several weeks.

* * * *

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman have returned to Washington after a two weeks' vacation in Palm Beach. Miss Ruth Tuckerman, who accompanied her parents to Florida, will remain in Palm Beach another week as the guest of Mrs. Thomas R. Crowell, before coming on to Washington.

Among those who entertained the Tuckermans in Palm Beach were Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Eppley and Mrs. Irving Hall Chase.

Helen Marie Wilson Will Become Bride At End of March

Miss Helen Marie Wilson, daughter of Mrs. William Pegram Wilson and the late Maj. Wilson, whose engagement to Rene Edmund Grosfils, of London, was announced recently, has selected the last week in March for her wedding. The exact date, however, has not yet been determined.

Mr. Grosfils, son of Mrs. Frank S. Hardy, is at present in London, but he will leave there soon for his trip to this country. Following their marriage, the couple will live in Hongkong, where the bridegroom will be associated with a British firm.

British Visitor Is Entertained

Miss Janet Richards will entain at dinner tonight for Miss Muriel Currey, of England, who is on an extended visit in this country and is staying at headquarters of the American Association of University Women.

Miss Currey, who is the daughter of Commander E. Hamilton Currey, of the British Royal Navy, has traveled all over Europe in recent years and has spent much time in Rome. She is a close friend of Mme. Olivia Rossetti Agresti, lecturer, of Rome, who visited Miss Richards here.

* * * *

The Washington Film Society has announced its program for the second half of the season.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be shown February 23; "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," with Rudolph Valentino, March 2; "Der Kaiser Von Kalifornien," a German version of "Sutter's Gold," March 23; "Anna Christie," April 6, and early American comedies, April 13. Programs are held at the Rialto Theater.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

FERNANDO Illanes-Benitez and his bride, the former Graciela Trucco, could subsist very nicely by opening an "Olde Silver Shoppe." Most of their friends seemed to have said it with silver, as far as could be judged from a survey of wedding presents on view at the reception following their marriage yesterday.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Mrs. Sumner Wells, wife of the Undersecretary of State, remembered the couple with a handsome covered vegetable dish. A beautiful burnished tray with a crest was the gift of the former Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, whose daughter, Miss Junia Culbertson, was a bridesmaid. The Chile America Association expressed good will with a magnificent Georgian coffee set.

* * * *

WHAT THE coffee crop is to Brazil, silver is to Chile, it seems, so the sisters and the brothers of the bride had sent home for a set of eight of practically everything necessary for the dinner table. Friends completed these to a round dozen.

There was a singular lack of the row upon row of highball and cocktail glasses which usually figure monotonously at displays of wedding gifts. Instead, lovely mahogany tables, fitted suitcases, at least a dozen handbags and handsome jewelry filled spaces between the silver.

HERBERT SCHOLZ, First Secretary of the German Embassy, will return Thursday from two weeks in Berlin, and Frau Scholz will go to New York to meet him. She is looking forward to a little theater dissipation and among the things she would like to see is the Garment Workers' hit, "Pins and Needles." The slang expressions of musical comedies are the Waterloo of most foreigners, but Frau Scholz is an exception, as her command of English is perfect.

* * * *

YESTERDAY FRAU SCHOLZ entertained at a small informal luncheon in her Cleveland avenue residence. Among those present were Mrs. Joseph Flack, Mrs. Louis Clark—their husbands are State Department officials; Mme. van Troosenburg de Bruyn, wife of the Secretary of the Netherlands Legation; Countess de Gramont, whose husband is Attache of the French Embassy; Miss Rebecca Wellington, and Mrs. Robert Munroe, wife of Capt. Munroe.

Mrs. McCook Knox, another guest, was dressed in tweeds, which more people should adopt here to relieve the incessant lame and other party materials. With her suit she wore a blue felt sports hat.

An alternative to tweeds is to brighten up your black ensemble with a bright blouse or flower or both. Mrs. Clark yesterday wore a yellow blouse and a matching posy on her lapel.

THE COMMERCIAL SECRETARY of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood will be honored at a farewell dinner next Friday by Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy. The Heywoods will be here for six weeks before retiring from diplomatic life and going back to London to live. Senator and Mrs. William G. McAdoo are making plans for another of the gay dinners which they give annually on April Fool's Day. Last year this party featured no end of gags and amusing speeches, but Mrs. McAdoo says that this time things will be different . . . Benjamin Plunket of the British Embassy will entertain at a small cocktail party this afternoon in his apartment.

Married in Leesburg

Hessler Studio.

MRS. DOUGLAS ROGERS PHILLIPS, who before her marriage yesterday at St. James Church in Leesburg, Va., was Miss Elizabeth Magruder Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Rust. Mr. Phillips is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Phillips, of Chevy Chase, Md.

Elizabeth Rust Becomes Bride

A marriage of interest in Washington, Maryland and Virginia took place yesterday afternoon at Leesburg, Va., when Miss Elizabeth Magruder Rust, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Rust, jr., became the bride of Douglas Rogers Phillips, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander K. Phillips, of Chevy Chase, Md.

The ceremony was performed in the St. James Episcopal Church, with the Rev. Harry B. Lee, of Baltimore, uncle of the bride, officiating. He was assisted by the Rev. G. Peyton Craighill, rector of St. JJames. Banks of plams and ferns with dozens of white lilies were used in decorating the church, which was lighted with tall, white candles. Miss Elizabeth Carter Davis, of Leesburg, played the nuptial music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory lace over satin, fashioned redingote style, with a standing collar and fan train. Her long tulle veil was attached to a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Bride's Sister Is Maid of Honor

Miss Caroline Rust, the bride's sister, was maid of honor, and Mrs. Raymond Parmer, of New York, was matron of honor. They wore dusty pink marquisette over taffets, made on princess lines with puffed sleeves. Pink gardenias and veils formed their headdress, and they carried bouquets of spring flowers.

The bridesmaids, whose costumes were like those of the maid of honor, were the Misses Eleanor and Mary Rust, sisters of the bride; Miss Sara Harrison, of Leesburg, and Miss Mary Nelson Lee, of Washington.

The bridegroom's brother Alexander K. Phillips, was best man. Ushers included another of the bridegroom's brothers, Herndon Phillips; the bride's brother, William Rust; James Mason; Smith Bowman, jr., and Charles Lynham.

Reception at Home Of Bride's Parents

Following the ceremony there was a reception at Rockridge, the home of the bride's parents. The newlyweds received the guests, assisted by the bride's mother, who was gowned in black net and a black picture hat. The spacious rooms of the Rust home were decorated for the occasion in palms, ferns and white roses.

Miss Boss Engaged To Alexander Heron

The engagement of Miss Barbara Boss to Alexander M. Heron has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry K. Boss. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander P. Heron of this city.

The wedding is scheduled to take place in the early spring.

Miss Boss is a graduate of Holton-Arms School. Mr. Heron was graduated from Georgetown University and is a member of the Barristers' and the Riding and Hunting Clubs.

Christine Long to Become Bride Of Arnold Willcox on April 18

Mrs. Mark Sullivan, Jr., Will Be Matron of Honor; Caroline Willcox to Be Maid of Honor in Ceremony at Laurel Estate.

Miss Christine Blair Long, daughter of the former United States Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, has selected April 18 as the date of her wedding to Arnold Auger Willcox, son of Mrs. Charles Willcox and the late Col. Willcox, of Washington.

Mrs. Mark Sullivan, jr., will be matron of honor and the maid of honor will be Miss Caroline Willcox, sister of the prospective bridegroom. The bride-elect will have no other attendants.

The ceremony will take place at 4 o'clock in the afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Montpelier Manor, near Laurel, Md., the Colonial house and estate which the Longs have so beautifully restored. The Rev. Bland Tucker will officiate. As yet the best man and the ushers have not been selected.

Miss Long, with her mother, Mrs. Breckinridge Long, returned to Washington yesterday from New York City where they had been spending most of the week.

Sponsored by Mrs. Robert W. Bingham, widow of the former United States Ambassador to Great Britain, Miss Long was presented to the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace in May, 1934. She made her debut at a tea in Grasslands on December 2, 1934, and her debutante ball took place early in January, 1935, also at Grasslands. She is a graduate of the Ethel Walker School.

On her father's side, Miss Long is descended from Samuel Miller Breckinridge, prominent attorney and founder of the Terminal Railroad. On her mother's side, she is a descendant of the late Benjamin B. Graham, well-known financier, also the late Gen. Frank P. Blair of Civil War fame.

Mr. Willcox attended Friends School, later entering Yale University where he was graduated from the school of engineering in 1932.

June Bridal Set By Miss Austin

Miss Margaret Elizabeth Austin, daughter of Capt. Charles Morrison Austin, U. S. N., and Mrs. Austin, has selected Saturday, June 18, as the date of her marriage to Dr. Joseph Wilson Johnson, jr., of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. Johnson, who is spending this winter in New York City, is a nephew of Rear Admiral and Mrs. David Foote Sellers.

Club Women Plan Aid to Orchestra

Business Committee and Guild Organize Fund Drive.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

There was "music in the air" at the Arts Club yesterday afternoon when the women's business committee and the Orchestra Guild met to lay final plans for their part in the National Symphony Orchestra's Campaign for funds. The meeting was all business, with music for the coming season inspiring the activity of the determined group of workers.

Rows of tables were lined up in two rooms on the second floor of the clubhouse and there the committee members worked, sorting cards and supplies and recording instructions for the campaign which begins February 23 and ends March 6—the date which will decide whether or not the National Capital is to have its Symphony Orchestra next year.

Mrs. Foster Adams, chairman of the Women's Business Committee, announced campaign headquarters would be in the lobby of the Carlton Hotel where someone would be on duty daily from 10 to 5 during the drive. The campaign office is in room 225 of the Carlton. She also announced four luncheons at which workers will bring in their reports, all to be held at the hotel, on February 25, 28 and March 3 and 7, at 12:30. Another social affair will be a tea at the Carlton at 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, marking the opening of the campaign.

The members of the women's teams will all be guests this afternoon at 1 o'clock at a rehearsal of the orchestra, which is to be broadcast from Constitution Hall.

Among the supplies provided the teams were pamphlets with questions and answers on how the money being raised will be used, and why the pledges will be returned if the full amount of $103,000 is not raised. When the workers go out they "will know all the answers" and be prepared to explain to their fellow Washingtonians anything they need to know about the orchestra and its value to the community.

Among those present yesterday were Mrs. David Craig and Mrs. C. Stanley Thompson, vice chairmen of Mrs. Foster's committee, and Mrs. Charles Buttinger, campaign chairman for the Orchestra Guild.

Team captains from the Women's Business Committee include Mrs. Clifford Jones, Mrs. Harold Master, Mrs. Joseph L. Miller, Mrs. Benjamin Jones and Mrs. Otto Simon. Others serving in this group are Miss Helen Buchalter, Mrs. Charles Collier, Mrs. Bert P. Garnett, Miss Louise Bernheimer, Mrs. Eugene F. Bogan, Mrs. C. Louis West, Miss Kathryn Krieg, Mrs. Gerald Morgan, Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling, Mrs. Harold Spivacke, Mrs. George Edward Ramsey, Mrs. Peter Langhoff, Mrs. Walter Loucheim, Miss Helen Miller, Miss Ann Moffatt, Miss Virginia Blackford, Mrs. Fred Denniston, Mrs. Fisher Dunlap, Mrs. Charles F. Keefer, Mrs. Walter Boyd, Mrs. Philip Bourne, Mrs. Richard Jewett, Miss Helen Kirkland, Miss Emily Storer, Mrs. Edward N. Waters, Mrs. Sarah Wollock, Miss Catherine Nimitz, Mrs. Benjamin Biays, Miss Winifred Burwell, Miss Nancy Cluett, Miss Jean De Lashmutt, Miss Elizabeth Dolan, Miss Beatrice P. Jones, Miss Eleanor Lauck, Mrs. Rusling Mesny, Mrs. F. C. Minnick, Mrs. David Barr and Miss Mildred Curran.

The captains for the Orchestra Guild group include Mrs. Warren Grimes, Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, Miss Jean Stire, Mrs. Frank Staley, Miss Marjorie Lewis, Mrs. Douglas Bement, Miss Pearl Waugh, Mrs. Boyd Taylor and Mrs. Bowin Fairfax.

Other guild workers are Miss Mary Burnett, Mrs. Lillian H. Burke, Mrs. F. T. Norcross, Mrs. M. C. Batchelder, Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Frank Byram, Mrs. John T. Lucker, Mrs. Maurice Robin, Mrs. Edwin Hahn, the Misses Hobart, Mrs. John Kratz, Mrs. Paul Brookett, Mrs. Rodney Bean, Miss Grace Clifton, Mrs. Norman Anderson, Miss Portia Oberly, Mrs. J. D. Richardson, Mrs. Daniel Borden, Miss Frances Carter, Mrs. Wilma Flood, Mrs. E. O. Hulburt, Mrs. James E. Miller, Mrs. Charles Stratton, Mrs. Frederick Haskins, Mrs. Charles T. Clagett, Mrs. W. D. Bigelow, Miss Gertrude Lutz, Mrs. James S. Taylor, Mrs. Thomas F. Opie, Mrs. W. W. Everett, Mrs. Hayward Brown, Mrs. Philip Gore, Miss Florence Brown, Mrs. G. A. Goetchius, Mrs. F. Hunter Creech, Mrs. Howard P. Foley, Miss Dorothy Thompson, Mrs. A. Hamilton Wilson and Mrs. Waldo Whitehead.

Kraft Honored By Music Club

The Friday Morning Music Club yesterday entertained at a luncheon in the Y. W. C. A. in honor of Arthur Kraft, tenor, who presented the morning program, accompanied by Miss Helen Neilly, of New York. Mr. Kraft, who is widely known as an oratorio singer, is now teaching at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester and devoting part of his time to concert.

The luncheon became a birthday party when the club members learned yesterday marked the birthdays of both Mr. Kraft and Mrs. Paul Tyler, corresponding secretary of the club. A cake was brought in and cut with fitting ceremony while Mack Morgan, a young baritone, who is an artist pupil of Mr. Kraft's and came to Washington with him for the concert, sang an impromptu birthday greeting.

This is the fifty-second anniversary of the club. Its programs are often by club members and, at other times, guest artists are invited to appear.

D. A. R. Group's Birthday Today

Judge Lynn Chapter of the D. A. R. will celebrate its thirtieth birthday anniversary at a tea this afternoon at the home of the regent, Mrs. Enoch Jasper Vann, 1426 Webster street.

The chapter, founded by Mrs. Bertha M. Robbins, was named in honor of Judge David Lynn, of Maryland, who takes his place as intrepid and fearless on his Judicial bench as Patrick Henry in the Legislature of Virginia, both protesting against burdensome taxation.

The chapter's most outstanding member was Miss Jane A. Delano, vice regent of the chapter at the time of her death, in April, 1919 at Savenay, France. As director general of the department of nursing, she was in France on an inspection trip. The American Red Cross has erected a monument to her and her co-workers on their beautiful grounds.

There have been eight regents in the history of Judge Lynn Chapter. Mrs. Bertha M. Robbins, founder and regent for 16 years is now honorary regent. Each of the following has served two years as regent, as provided by the by-laws. Mrs. Harry G. Gauss, Mrs. Charles S. Schermerhorn, Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, Mrs. Harry R. Fulton, Mrs. J. Milton Jester, and Mrs. Donald M. Earll. Mrs. Enoch J. Vann is completing her second year.

Officers of Marcia Burns Chapter are being entertained at 1:30 this afternoon in the Raleigh by Mrs. Minnie Ashbrook Tull, the regent. Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent, and Miss Lillian Chenoweth, State vice regent will be guests of honor.

Miss Richards to Talk To Girls Monday Night

Miss Janet Richards will address the Girls' Friendly Society of Epiphany Church Monday night at its meeting in the parish hall, 1317 G street, at 8:30.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE SOCIETY OF WOMEN Geographers has issued a memorial bulletin in tribute to marriet Chalmers Adams, a pioneer in the field of practical geography. From girlhood she explored far corners of the earth in order to interpret them to others, covering more than 100,000 miles in South America, Europe and Africa.

She was the first president of the Society of Women Geographers, of which Mary Vaux Walcott, of Washington, is now head. The bulletin includes pictures of her and tributes from many distinguished persons who came in contact with her in her work. Among them are Dr. Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic Society; John Oliver LaGorce, vice president, and Gen. James G. Harbord.

The final tribute is from Helen M. Strong, treasurer of the society, who tells of her interest in establishing an endowment fund to aid other women geographers—a fund which now has been named in Mrs. Adams' honor.

STATE SOCIETIES are planning elaborate parties this week, the first of which will be that of the Virginia Society Monday night at the Willard, in celebration of Washington's Birthday. Not only will there be a Colonial ball, but also a historical pageant, portraying the Virginia Convention which, after a bitter debate, finally ratified the new Constitution.

Justice John Marshall will speak through his great-great-grandson, Jack A. Marshall, in favor of the Constitution. George Mason will oppose the Constitution, voicing his protest through his great-great-grandson, Rice Howe.

Washington, while not attending the convention, will be represented by I. Chance Buchanan, and Mrs. Washington by Mrs. Richard A. Allen.

THE IOWA SOCIETY has chosen Washington's Birthday for a party in honor of Iowans in the uniformed services and will include a minuet by children in colonial costume. Another feature will be a fencing bout by Maj. E. L. Dyer, World War veteran and coach of the Musketeers; Col. Edwin Emerson, one of Col. Roosevelt's Rough Riders in the Spanish American War; Lieut. Belos Wait, of the Navy, and Maj. Walter G. Farrell, of the Marine Corps.

Miss Gertrude M. Louis, of the Roosevelt Hotel, is in charge of reservations.

PEN PORTRAITS OF club women and outlines of club problems every woman schooled in organization work will instantly recognize, characterize the new booklet, "Questions and Answers," by Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women, which comes off the press today. In the booklet, under the caption of "What To Do When—" Miss Phillips undertakes to deal with situations and personalities that complicate a club program.

One of the familiar characters she presents is the club president with dictator inclinations, whose attitude is "I Am the State." "Her very sacrificial service for the club may have developed an identification complex which makes it difficult to realize where the club leaves off and she personally begins," Miss Phillips says. "When she exceeds her authority the matter should be tactfully but firmly brought to the attention of the club as a whole so that her action may be ratified or renounced. If the wholesome interest and loyalty of the membership is to be retained, the president must be not the master, but the servant of the club."

The "habitual fault-finder" is another club personality Miss Phillips holds up to scrutiny. "Give these people specific jobs and not too easy jobs at that," she advises. "Keep your members too busy for nagging complaint."

Aids Benefit

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. CHARLES PUTNAM, who is among the sponsors for a series of candlelight concerts being arranged by the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy to aid loyalist children in Spain. The concerts are to be February 25, March 4 and March 11 at 4:45 o'clock in the Phillips Memorial Gallery.

Matrons Sponsor 3 Concerts to Aid Spanish Children

A series of three candlelight concerts is to be given at the Phillips Memorial Gallery under auspices of the Women's Committee to Aid Spanish Children, a branch of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy.

Many socially prominent women are acting as sponsors for the musicales which will be presented February 25, March 4 and March 11 at 4:45. Mrs. Louis Brandeis, Mrs. James LeCron, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Mrs. Charles Putnam and Mrs. Morris Cafritz are among those arranging the series. Mrs. Gardner Jackson is chairman of the Women's Committee which expects to be able to pay for the maintenance of 25 Spanish children for six months with proceeds of the benefit. The children, who are innocent victims of the Spanish war, are being cared for in the beautiful Villa Gordo Home, near Valencia.

The Pro Musica Quartet—Frederich Evonch, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand—will present the programs for two of the musicales and the third will be a sonata recital by Velma Kaplan, pianist, and Leo Krakow and Ralph Hersh, violinists.

Pan-Hellenic President Here

Mrs. Frank M. Genty 3d, president of the National Panhellenic Congress, who is here for the luncheon today of the City Panhellenic Association, will be guest of honor at a tea this afternoon at which Alpha Delta Theta Sorority is entertaining. The affair will be from 4 to 6 in the college chapter room, with Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard, luncheon speaker, and delegates, national officers and province presidents of other national Panhellenic groups as guests.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Gentry will be Mrs. Richard Blackwelder, president of the Alumnae chapter; Mrs. Baxter Smith, national vice president of Alpha Delta Theta, and Mrs. Leighton W. Johnston.

Miss Doris Hayes and Miss Helen A. Clark will pour and Miss Deborah Daniel is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Because of a large number of requests, arrangements have been made to sell tickets at the door for the Panhellenic luncheon which will be held at 1:30 p. m. today in the Blue Room of the Shoreham.

All members of the 23 National Panhellenic Congress sororities are invited to attend the luncheon which is the annual get-together of Panhellenic members in Washington.

Guests of honor will meet for a short informal reception in the Garbo Room of the Shoreham before the luncheon.

Party for Relief In China Linked With Style Show

Ambassador Donates Cards; Ancient Warrior Robes to Be Exhibited.

The Ambassador of China, C. T. Wang, has donated the cards to be used at the bridge being given February 28 at the Shoreham for the benefit of war relief in China, by the Chinese Women's Association. It is expected more than 150 tables will be sold for the affair, which also will include a fashion show of modern and ancient Chinese costumes and a tea.

The fashion show is being repeated at the request of those who were unable to attend that presented last fall at the first of the benefit affairs sponsored by the association. Among members of the organization who will act as models will be Miss Hilda Yen, niece of Dr. W. W. Yen, former Minister of China here, who has recently been guest of honor and speaker before many Washington groups.

Miss An-Fu Wang, one of the daughters of the Chinese Ambassador, and Miss Lois Ing, daughter of the counselor of the embassy, will wear elaborately embroidered dresses. J. Z. Huang, of the embassy staff, and J. C. Yang, of the Chinese division of the Library of Congress, will display the robes of ancient warriors and Chinese gentlemen.

Little Chinese girls in native costumes will move about among the guests carrying small lacquered trays with Chinese curios and candies. Many varieties of fragrant Chinese tea and beautiful art objects also will be on sale. A special sale in charge of Mrs. Henry Albers will include a gaily embroidered Chinese skirt, a Chinese scroll of the Empress Dowager, a pair of carved ivory bracelets, and a lovely mandarin coat.

There will be a bridge prize for each table.

Mrs. Z. T. Ing, wife of the Counselor of the Embassy, is in charge of reservations for the bridge and fashion show and is general chairman of arrangements for it.

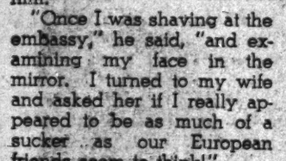
"Can you imagine the grim-faced Cal sitting alongside that fountain?" asked a Southern statesman at a reception there the other day.

This is the embassy of the Loyalists . . . Franco's rebels have no embassy nor ambassador; just an old regime diplomat once stationed here, who sneaks in and out of Washington incognito. He spends most of his time in New York.



"—bit of secret diplomacy"

Some of the Washington boys threw a farewell party for that newly launched diplomat, Joe Kennedy . . . Movies and skits were rigged up to rib our new envoy to England . . . But the hour for the party came and passed, and no Joe Kennedy appeared. It seemed that news of the joke had leaked out.

When they had about given him up, in walked the rough-and-ready Ambassador, all togged out in satin breeches, with an aide similarly attired, flanked by trumpeters.

The Briton was impassive. He seemed to be meditating . . . Suddenly, 10 minutes later, Sir Ronald licked a finger and smacked his fist down on his palm.

600 Autos Bear Congressional Immunity Tags

Plates Carry Special Privileges; Enforcement Demands Renewed.

A new demand for rigid and impartial traffic enforcement came from Capitol Hill yesterday as records at the Department of Vehicles and Traffic showed that approximately 600 "Congressional" tags, granting special privileges to the holders, are now in use on Washington streets.

One Representative, it was reported, has been issued three tags—each with different numbers. At least 13 others, according to records, have applied for duplicates. The law allots but one plate to each member of Congress.

Under the Congressional automobile tag act, approved December 19, 1932, the special plates cannot be assigned to or used by persons other than members of Congress and certain officers of the Capitol. With all vacancies filled, there are 631 members of both Houses.

Police, however, have reported repeatedly that "Congressional" tags are being used by clerks, secretaries and other Capitol Hill employes. Application for tag assignments must be made in the handwriting of authorized holders.

Use of the special privilege plates for personal purposes—as in the case of one Representative who recently parked illegally to attend a downtown theater — is prohibited under the act.

At the same time yesterday, Representative William Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, chairman of a House sub-committee on traffic, called upon Washington police to enforce traffic regulations "without fear or favor."

"I'll stand behind the Police Department 100 per cent when they enforce the traffic laws—whether they arrest members of Congress or not," he said.

His committee, Schulte declared, is attempting to aid District authorities in their efforts to reduce the number of highway accidents and deaths.

Ship Captain Describes Sail Around Horn

Seventeen gales in 20 days, some of them blowing at hurricane speed—more than 100 miles an hour—waves 50 feet high, and blinding rain and hail storms; these were among the thrilling adventures of the crew of the "Wanderbird," the 80-foot sailing schooner of Capt. Warwick M. Tompkins, who told members of the National Geographic Society how his family and a small crew sailed out of Gloucester, Mass., and eight months later, after rounding the southern tip of South America, entered the Golden Gate at San Francisco.

During the voyage, Tompkins made motion pictures which illustrated the lecturer's remarks last night. Fifteen college boys made the voyage from Gloucester to Tangier by way of the Azores, the Madeira Islands, and Casablanca, Morocco.

Rounding the Horn, the "Wanderbird" came so close to the southernmost tip of South America that Tompkins made a series of pictures of the conical mountain, a rare feat. Most ships have given the point wide berth.

Reds Rush Us To War Crisis, Avers Walsh

Due in 3 or 4 Months, He Declares in First of Lecture Series.

Says Soviet Is at Low Ebb and Assails Envoy's Address.

"Forces which would not hesitate to plunge us into the most disastrous war of history are now at work in America," the Rev. Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University, charged last night.

In grave and measured voice, the regent of Georgetown's famed school of foreign service predicted that "the crisis will occur within three or four months."

"This is the time," he declared, "for clear vision on the bridge of our ship of state and a steady hand at the wheel in determining future American policy in the Far East."

The warning by Dr. Walsh concluded a lecture on the Russian Revolution and world communism, heard by an audience of 800 in Memorial Continental Hall.

Soviet At Low Ebb.

The fortunes of the Soviet state are today at their lowest ebb since 1918, he asserted.

Attacking Alexander Troyanovsky's speech last week at the University of North Carolina as a violation of accepted diplomatic usage, Dr. Walsh declared that the Soviet Ambassador's remarks revealed "the desperation that now grips the commissars."

By appealing over the head of the State Department to the American people for a united front with Great Britain and the U. S. S. R., he contended the Russian envoy gave clear proof of "the panic and recklessnehs which must prevail at Moscow."

United front tactics having been successfully pursued by Russia in France and Spain, "the mandate now enters into Soviet-American diplomatic relations, and the Soviet Embassy on Sixteenth street becomes the Trojan Horse for the United States."

Stalin's "Confession."

Stalin's overture to the working classes of the world to organize for aid to Russia in case of military attack, made Monday in Moscow, was termed by Dr. Walsh "both a confession and a warning."

"Under the traditional pretext of defending the Soviet Union, the director reminded workers of all lands that Lenin's teaching should never be forgotten that 'the permanent existence of the Soviet Republic beside capitalist states is inconceivable.'

"Having executed nearly 5,000 victims in the last 12 months within Russia, he now appeals to world communism to stand by for the final crisis."

Further evidence that Russia faces a major crisis was seen by Dr. Walsh in the reported flight from Bucharest to Rome of Jodor Butenko, missing charge d'affaires of the Soviet legation in Rumania.

"The Fever Mounts."

"As the fever chart mounts both within and without Russia," he said, "the international horizon simultaneously grows more confused, darker and more threatening."

Dr. Walsh opened his address by discussing political, social and economic conditions in the pre-war Russian empire, likening the vast domain of the Romanovs to an inverted pyramid—"at the base the ruling class, composed of 1½ per cent of the population, above, the discontented, illiterate masses."

"I have always had the heartiest sympathy with the aspirations of the Russian people in their long fight for liberty," he said.

"The tragedy is that their hopes have been deceived and that they are today victims of an equally tyrannical exploitation and suppression."

Business Scores Dupont Circle Underpass Plan

50 Merchants, Property Owners Fear Creation of 'Ghost' Avenue.

In an attempt to defeat the proposed construction of an underpass at Dupont Circle, more than 50 businessmen and property owners from the vicinity met with Senators and Representatives yesterday at the home of Mrs. Joseph Leiter, 1500 New Hompshire avenue northwest.

The businessmen told the Congressmen—including Senators Hale, of Maine, and Thomas, of Oklahoma—that traffic at Dupont Circle is not heavy enough at the present time to justify an underpass. They bolstered their arguments by taking observations from the windows of the Leiter library.

Veteran of the Indian Wars Rests for While in Cell Here

Police Buy Beans and Bread for Albert Neilson, Found Entertaining Children With Stories of Old West.

Old Albert Neilson, veteran of the Indian wars who remembers "Wild" Bill Hickok and "Calamity" Jane, found an end to his wanderings last night.

He sat in a cell at Seventh Precinct Station and stroked his long white hair and beard in bewilderment. A few hours earlier he had been arrested on a technical charge of vagrancy. The patrolmen found him by a shack he had built on a lot in the 2000 block of Wisconsin avenue. He had been regaling neighborhood children with tales of days in the Old West, and several of the youngsters had brought him sandwiches, which he refused to eat, although he was hungry.

"It was just a lean-to—a windbreaker," mumbled Neilson.

The police were kind. They took the 75-year-old Swedish-born pioneer to a corner grocery store and bought him some beans and bread and meat.

"I'm old and tired," he said. "Maybe the only adventure left for me is death."

Neilson came to America when he was 17, he told police. He went to Oregon in the early days of transcontinental railroads.

In 1884 he joined the Twenty-second Infantry in Montana, at Fort Kehoe, and fought against the Sioux, the Black Feet and the Crows. He was discharged in 1889, and bought a farm near Corvallis, Oreg. Here he grew up with the country.

In 1908 he lost everything he had.

So, he said last night, he set out, a homeless man, still able to work. He followed the harvests until he became too old. Then he wandered East.

Right now Old Albert is not particularly interested in what happens to him.

"I'd like to get a pension," he said, and he smiled wearily when someone suggested the Soldiers' Home.

"I guess there are a few old Indian fighters there," he mused.

Rep. Bacon Scores Lack of Funds for Training School

The Budget Bureau was warned on the House floor yesterday that it must approve more adequate funds for the National Training School for Boys next year.

Representative Bacon (Republican), of New York, took the floor to defend the $270,000 appropriation in the State, Justice, Commerce and Labor supply bill, which is $18,660 over the Budget Bureau estimate.

The House sub-committee allowed four more teachers and several additional guards, Bacon said, but this was insufficient.

School Board Rule Of D.C. Play Urged

Recommendation that all supervision of the recreational facilities and activities of the District, with the exception of those now under the National Park Service, be transferred to the Board of Education, was made yesterday by the Public Schools Committee, of the Washington Board of Trade.

With Chairman E. Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Automobile Club, presiding, the committee met in the Harrington Hotel at noon.

Civic Groups Start Drive on Charity Fakes

Other Cities Asked How Racketeers May Be Controlled.

Woman Solicitor's Iron Lung Hoax Newest in Series.

Plans for a concerted offensive against District charity rackets are being pushed on several fronts, The Post learned yesterday.

An appeal for information on measures taken by other municipalities to put fake charities out of business will go out to 5 American and Canadian cities early next week in the bulletin of the Washington Better Business Bureau.

Bureaus in all cities having local statutes, ordinances or license acts governing charity solicitations will be requested to send copies of the regulations to Joseph Marshall, director of the local Better Business office.

The Newest Fraud.

Meanwhile in a radio broadcast Marshall yesterday warned citizens against the city's newest charity racket, an appeal for funds "to purchase an iron lung for the child welfare clinic of Freedmen's Hospital."

The Better Business Bureau is informed that the hospital has not authorized use of its name in connection with any such solicitation, Marshall stated.

The solicitor, a woman, began work on the telephone Thursday morning, he said, offering immediately to send out a collector to any address where a donation was promised.

The bureau's Nation-wide inquiry into charity regulation follows receipt of a letter expressing the interest of the District Board of Commissioners in "controlling the problem" of these appeals.

Chest to Lend Help.

Signed by G. M. Thornett, secretary to the Commissioners, the letter invited the bureau's cooperation in furnishing information "with respect to organizations engaged in soliciting the public for funds for other than legitimate purposes."

Co-operation of the Community Chest in any effort to curb the charity rackets was pledged yesterday by Herbert Willett, director.

"We will be glad to aid in every possible way in framing an ordinance or forming a committee for study of the subject," Willett said.

Regulatory control over all charity solicitation, as outlined last week in The Post articles on charity rackets, was the subject of a recent conference between Marshall and Randolph Bishop, of the Community Chest.

D.C. Relief Meeting Called for Today

A mass meeting of citizens concerned over the lack of relief for unemployed Washingtonians will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the board room of the District Building.

Leading residents of the District and representatives from civic organizations and church groups will attend. An invitation has been extended all citizens who are aroused over the condition of the unemployed to attend. Resolutions expressing the need for adequate relief are to be presented and a permanent organization committee is to be formed which will press for a solution of the problem.

Lanham Tells This (But Not to the Police)

Clifford L. Lanham, District superintendent of trees and parkings, yesterday told this one on himself.

One night not so long ago he wasn't feeling well, so he called his physician and asked him to come out to the big house at 4210 Alabama avenue southeast where Lanham lives alone. The ailing tree keeper unlocked the door for the doctor's—and his own—convenience and climbed upstairs and into bed.

A short while later the stillness of the night was broken by voices of colored men in a violent argument, or maybe one was holding up the other.

"Oh yes you do have money."

"I tell you I haven't."

And so forth. Remembering that his door was unlocked Lanham, whose house stands alone in a lonely section near Fort Dupont, first telephoned for police then got up, picked up a loaded shotgun and went to the head of the stairs.

He was half way down the staircase when the door opened slowly. Lanham raised his young cannon and prepared for action.

In walked the physician.

When Lanham explained his belligerent appearance, the doctor broke out into loud laughter. When his guffawing subsided sufficiently, he explained:

"Those weren't burglars or hoodlums. What you heard was Amos and Andy coming in on my auto radio. I sat in the car several minutes listening to them before getting out to see you."

Lanham confessed he has not yet summoned the courage to tell the facts to the policemen who responded to his call.

Glossy Comedy Is Screen Hit At the Capitol

'Baroness and Butler' Is Gay Item for Star Cast; Ates a Stage 'Wow.'

"THE BARONESS AND THE BUTLER." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a play by Ladislaus Bus-Fekete, adapted to the screen by Sam Hellman, Lamar Trotti and Kathryn Scola, costarring William Powell and Annabella, with Helen Westley, Henry Stephenson, Joseph Schildkraut, J. Edward Bromberg, Lynn Bari, Maurice Cass, Joan Simpson, Algernon Etier, Claire DuBrey and Nigel Bruce. Directed by Walter Lang. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Some gently taming influence was at work on the Hays office when they bestowed their blessing on "The Baroness and the Butler." Not that this critic disapproves a-tall of this amiable leniency. Quite otherwise.

But it is only fair to record that the accomplished butler, William Powell, falls in love with the married daughter of his employer. Not only does Bill fall in love with Annabella, but she takes a terrific tumble for him and once and twice her husband walks in on them in the midst of a frenzied "clinch." Add on the comical and fat Nigel Bruce in the role of Annabella's would-be lover. Also add a climax that reminds you of those naughty verses that fool you by using a harmless word in the last line. But add it all up and the result is, we maintain, knowing but harmless entertainment, a bit careless about legality, perhaps, but essentially moral.

There is a flippancy and lightness about the Walter Lang direction of "The Baroness and the Butler" that is reminiscent of the Lubitsch that used to be. There is the same richness of detail, magical character lighting and impertinence of incident. True, they light up an inconsequential story, but the illumination is very bright.

The story, all chifon, is about a butler who gets himself elected to the Parliament of Hungary (now as mythical as Graustark), falls in love with his master's daughter and pays political blackmail to the lady's husband. But each and every character, large and small, is delightfully individualized: there is a champagne-like bubble of tricky circumstances.

A Superlative Cast.

Annabella, charming furious, tender, catty, sugary, by turns, proves one of Hollywood's most worthwhile European importations. The lady is an actress, and she has a flock of ways that are all her own.

William Powell, most suave of screen heroes, chalks up one of his best performances, adding some swell public speaking and quite a burst of passion and embarrassment to his usual smoothness. Helen Westley and Henry Stephenson, as the Count and Countess Sandor, offer their best and most amusing performances, which is saying a lot, considering that they are always topping.

That superb actor, Joseph Schildkraut, has a mean role as the cheating husband, but carries it off with flawless polish and viciousness. The settings and photography of the picture are an unadulterated delight.

"Modern Dixie," a short trip through Louisiana, is smart and well photographed. The newsreel is generally fair, though Lowell Thomas is more than usually inane, but this is made up by our cock-eyed pal, Mr. Lew Lehr, who had the audience in stitches.

Roscoe Ates a Hit.

Despite a cluster of excellent performers, the stage presentation exhibits a certain lack of pacing, arrangement and introduction.

Roscoe Ates, Hollywood's star stammerer, offers one of the best acts presented by movie folks. Not only does Roscoe stammer, he plays the violin and trombone quaintly and gets funnier as he goes along. He is assisted by a smart little redhead, introduced as Miss Ray.

Swing that swings away out is offered by Emory Deutsch, with the young and handsome director also offering a beautiful violin solo. This act also possesses a treasure in hlim Katherine Hoyt who sings "Thanks For the Memories" in a way you'll remember. Nora Williams sings and whistles in stentorian and jolly fashion. Arthur La Fleur, the "Human Top" swings by his teeth for an unbelievable length of time.

An extra-special treat was added to the stage show by the appearance of the Glee Club of Emory University of Atlanta. These lads sang gorgeously, offering a series of the finer spirituals.

RKO-Keith's

"SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS." Walt Disney's first feature length production in Technicolor for RKO-Radio. Famous Grimm fairy tale executed in cartoon form under supervising director David Hand. Reviewed, second week, by Dorothea Lewis.

There just aren't any words for this. The old words won't do, and anyhow everybody else has used up the best old ones already.

There should be a completely new set of words made up—bright words, chuckling words—for "Snow White" is all of those things. You can't just say it is swell, or great, or fine, or different, or exciting, or terribly, terribly funny. You shouldn't admit that it is "indescribable," like the Grand Canyon. Certainly, it is all these things, but it is something more, something much more important and enduring. It is, all the pessimists and authorities and historians to the contrary, something new under the sun.

But how express it? How can you explain how real Snow White and her Prince are, how naturally they walk and move and talk and sing, and yet how beautifully unreal they are at one and the same time? What about that over-ambitious young bluebird who hits the flat above high C so resoundingly and ecstatically? And the banyo-eyed raccoons and all the other furry animals?

Can we describe Dopey, the delectable one who has completely stolen our hearts, as "deliricious" perhaps? And what can we say about the cataclysmic effect of Sneezy's hay fever except that it out-hurricanes "The Hurricane"? In the case of Grumpy—dear Grumpy—all we can do is go to the Disney cupboard and describe him as Donald-Duckable, for we are certain we recognized Donnie's dulect tones in the words of this new misanthrope.

"You see, you simply cannot get it on paper, unless it happens to be the magic paper which that Magician Disney uses. What satisfaction it must be to pick your characters, create them body, soul, brain, speaking voice, singing voice, facial expression, timing and all. Sort of sublime, eh Mr. Disney?

'Gold Is Where You Find It' Scores at the Earle; Robert Taylor's Best Is 'Yank at Oxford,' Palace

"GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT." Warner-First National picturization of the story by Clements Ripley, adapted to the screen by Warren Duff and Robert Buckner, featuring George Brent, Olivia de Havilland and Claude Rains, with Margaret Lindsay, John Litel, Tim Holt, George Hayes, Russell Simpson, Willie Best, Barton MacLane, Harry Davenport, Eddy Chandler, Sidney Toler, Robert McWade and Maroni Olsen. Directed by Michael Curtiz. Previewed Monday, February 14. At the Earle Theater.

BELL.

"Gold Is Where You Find It," first of all, is a big picture—majestic in setting, strong in acting personnel, substantial in basic fact. Furthermore, it is lent the added value of picturesque Technicolor photography that enhances, rather than impedes, its dramatic forcefulness.

Much has been said here and elsewhere of this picture's legitimate claim to distinction as an "epic" production by reason of its deft utilization of authentic incidents in history to serve as a framework for its romance and excitement. It should be understood at the outset that "Gold Is Where You Find It" was devised primarily for expansive and thrilling entertainment and not as a history lesson. It happily fulfills both functions, with the heavier accent on its intention to amuse.

The story, as must be known by now, pivots upon the bitter battle that was waged between the wheat growers of the lowlands and the hydraulic miners in the mountains for control of the Sacramento Valley in the early days of California's development. First are met the members of the Ferris family, wheat growers for generations on end. Jarod Whitney, a New England mining engineer, comes to the valley to take charge of the gold mine operated by a San Francisco syndicate of wealthy and avaricious magnates. That is the genesis of the drama's romantic trends. The dramatic thunder occurs when the miners seek to nullify by physical violence the United States Court's decision that the agrarians' rights are being infringed. This movement of the tale is marked by suspense, mounting waves of action and death by violence.

Moves to Frisco.

During the progress of melodramatic developments, the locale of the action is shifted to the gaudy life that was led by San Francisco's rich in the late '70s, with the famous Poodle Dog Bar and Cafe the center of activities that are as fascinatingly opulent as they are logically indigenous to the character and purpose of the story.

Against these variegated backgrounds, a fine group of screen players make the most of the rich dramatic material that has been supplied them. George Brent is cast as the young "interloper" who falls in love with the daughter of the leader of the faction he is supposed to be fighting; Olivia de Havilland is the girl and Claude Rains her wheat-baron father. In roles of only slightly less importance are to be found such reliable craftsmen as John Litel, Tim Holt, Margaret Lindsay, who contributes one of her best performances to this subject; Sidney Toler, the late Robert McWade, Barton MacLane, Maroni Olsen and numerous others of like rating.

To all of this Technicolor's natural color photography adds a realistic effect that comprises one of the film's most valuable assets. Never before have Miss de Havilland and Miss Lindsay been seen on the screen with such complete realization of their stunning beauty. The far-flung scenes in the open frequently partake of the hazy beauty of a Corot painting, the distant mountain backgrounds furnishing an illusion of depth that seems to lend the silver sheet the long-sought advantage of a third dimension.

Michael Curtiz' expert direction is even and swiftly paced. His flood scenes mark almost as advanced an achievement in technical perfection as the storm scenes in "The Hurricane."

Music and a Dancer.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is dominated by Will Osborne and his "slide orchestra." This "slide music" of Mr. Osborne's is something of an innovation. It manages agreeable effects in a novel interpretation of popular tunes by that musical approach that was known in a less sophisticated day as the "slur." There is more melody in his band than in most that play local stages. And the Osborne voice still is a pleasant barytone that can be converted into a devastating caricature of Rudy Vallee's—and is.

Among the Osborne specialists are three who stand out above the rest—Janice Todd, vocalist; Gloria Gilbert, a spinning sensation on her toes, and those incomparable slow-motion gymnasts and hand-balancers, the Ghezzis. Nothing like Miss Gilbert's toe-dancing ever has been seen on a Washington stage. I doubt if there is anyone else in the world who can do the things she does, gracefully and effortlessly. She is literally a human top—and a very handsome one, at that.

A novelty overture of No. 1 popular song hits, with the lyrics flashed upon the screen, serves as an excuse for Jo Lombardi to pass a microphone through the audience in quest of new voices. He found some yesterday afternoon — probably planted there by himself!

The Paramount News further augments a feature that cannot be catalogued elsewhere than in the upper brackets.

Metropolitan

"BOY OF THE STREETS." Monogram picturization of a story by Rayland Brown, adapted to the screen by Gilson Brown and Scott Darling, starring Jackie Cooper with Maureen O'Connor, Kathleen Burke, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Marjorie Main, Mattie Peters, George Cleveland, Gordon Elliott, Guy Usher and Paul White. Directed by William Nigh. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan Theater.

"Boy of the Streets" is well worth going to see, if for no other reason than to gloat over the adroit manner in which the director prevents the dramatic scenes from bogging-down with sentimentality, which they would have done in less-skilled hands.

There is only one questionable handling of theme in the entire play, and that is practically the last scene, so it may be forgiven. The story as a whole is a remarkable treatment of the now familiar indictment that young boys of the tenement section in large cities do not have a chance in life.

Around Chuck Brennan, cocky fighting leader of one mob, the story revolves. Chuck and his gang have a Club in a deserted building. There is a shy little girl, named Nora, who sings and whose mother is carried off to a sanitarium. There is a lovely rich girl, who inherits the dirty tenement and resolves to clean it up and attempt to rejuvenate at least one of the children. It is Nora whom she selects. There is a young doctor from the nearby Emergency Hospital, who denounces the setup which permits disease, crime, poverty, as it exists in the section.

And besides the humble, filthy, sad, hopeless misfits, who infest the building like cockroaches, there is the incredibly well-cast family of Chuck. Drab mother, lazy but honest father, they scrap interminably about how they shall live, how they shall rear their growing child.

The gang fights go on, with Chuck's young band of toughs fearlessly swapping punches in some fine knock-down-drag-outs with another mob of young hellions with fine jawlines and a heritage of rags.

Chuck falls in with a tinhorn gambler, a tough fellow with steely eyes and a largish police record. Comes redemption when Roark, the friendly cop, is shot by the gambler. Realizing his gang at least fought without guns, Chuck forsakes a life of crime and joins the Navy.

In the newsreel, those Petworth ladies who have that band in which they use kitchen utensils, may see themselves as others see them. There is a right cunning little short with Ray Whitley and his musical cowboys which contains some elegant Western ballads.

The Jealous Matron in 'Gold'

MARGARET LINDSAY

as she appears in the role of the young San Francisco society matron in "Gold Is Where You Find It," this week's major screen attraction at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Miss Lindsay formerly was a student at National Park Seminary and frequently visits Washington.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 18.—Mary Boland, picture, radio and stage star, after buying her first Beverly Hills home, did it completely over. Built a swimming pool and added a new wing. Then up and sold it to Joe Pasternak for less than the original price. She bought a vacant lot across the street, where the gophers used to play hide and seek.

HEDDA HOPPER.

The new home is so happy you laugh the moment you get inside the front door. Mary has incorporated every gadget invented. Her bedroom got a little out of hand in size; it's large enough to hold Albertina Rasch and her ballet, but feminine withal. Off that, two balconies; one for breakfast and one for the moonlight sonata. Her pan pantry is lined entirely with tin; you could spend hours looking at it, getting exactly the same effect you do from those goofy concave mirrors in the Fun House at Venice.

There's a shelf for the maid's radio, and a grinder in the kitchen sink which takes care of all the left-overs—even bones. Mary said to me: "And that's where you'll go if you dare trump my ace."

At one corner of her bathhouse, beside the swimming pool, you push back a sliding door, and there is a complete bar in red, white and blue. And over her garage she's built a little penthouse, which she hopes the revolutionists will let her keep when they take over. She's having a crest made to put over the front door of the main house, with a checkbook in one hand and a pen in the other and "Sucker" written in Latin. Now she has a tempting offer and may go to London for four months.

Paul Muni's manager is so certain that Paul will receive the Academy award again he's cabled him to return, so he'll be here for the Academy dinner March 3.

When the Windsors were coming to Hollywood, one of our best newspaper women, who knew Nancy Astor in Virginia, wrote for an introduction. Lady Astor didn't wait to writet. She telegraphed: "Sorry, I don't even know the Duchess of Windsor."

When Gloria Swanson steps off the train in New York, she'll step right into a beautifully furnished apartment, prepared by that millionaire music publisher. Understand it's to be wedding bells.

Spent the evening at Norma Shearer's home, where Bob Sherwood read his script of "Idiot's Delight" to Norma and Clark Gable. I can hardly wait to see Clark do a song and dance. He'll be good, too. Garbo wanted to do this picture.

It took Bob Taylor, the Don Ameches and Jack Bennys to get Barbara Stanwyck off her ranch and into a night club. She said she felt just like Farmer Joe—and while she was watching George Raft, Ruby Keeler and all the other Trocadero dervishes doing a snaky Rhumba, she was surreptitiously pulling hayseeds out of her hat!

Gail Patrick has just been given permission to dine again with her husband by the Actors' Guild. Months ago they denied her the right to go into the Brown Derby owing to the strike. What would you do if told you couldn't dine with your husband?

But in spite of this Gail has done all right for herself. A few years ago her weekly pay check was $50—now it's $1,000 every week in the year.

The baby selected to play His Royal Highness, the dauphin of France in "Marie Antoinette," is the first ever born to pay its own way into the world. He was chosen three weeks before his birth and selected from 31 expectant mothers. His name is Harvey Albach, jr. He'll receive $75 a day and begins work when he's 9 days old.

Columbia

"Everybody Sing," that musicalized story of a frenzied and slightly mad family striving for success in the theater, returned to the F street screen yesterday as chief feature of the new week's bill at the Columbia Theater.

This is the merry affair in which Allan Jones, Judy Garland, Fanny Brice, Reginald Owen, Billie Burke and Reginald Gardiner carry the brunt of the labor—and the fun. Little Judy Garland plays and and sings her role with the skill and assurance of a veteran, matching her work, talent for talent, with that of her older associates. Fanny Brice scores a complete triumph in both song and comedy—introducing the inevitable "Snooks" impersonation—and Miss Burke and Mr. Owen, as battling parents, seldom have been better. Of Mr. Gardiner, after having seen him in "The Show Is On," not quite so much can be said. Allan Jones, as a musical chef, is one of the major bulwarks of the piece.

Among others who contribute in lesser degree to the gay goings-on are Lynne Carver, Monty Woolley, Adia Kuznetzoff, Henry Armetta and Mard Forbes. With its nine or ten swingy songs—and some that are not so swingy—"Everybody Sing" is a melodious treat.

Youngster's Life.

Janet Chapman, sensational 5-year-old child "find," who is playing the title role of "Little Lady Luck," has such a dramatic and human story behind her "crashing pictures" that it may be purchased and made into a picture starring her. It concerns an illness of her mother, father's disappointments in getting work and a remarkable sequence of "good deeds" folk did for the tot right up to and including the time she was tested for a "bit" and got the leading role instead.

Film Made in Britain Is Lively College Comedy With Fine Cast.

"A YANK AT OXFORD." Metro-by Leon Gordon, Sidney Gilliatt and Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story Michael Hogan, adapted to the screen by Malcolm Stuart Boylan, Walter Ferris and George Oppenheimer, starring Robert Taylor, with Maureen O'Sullivan, Lionel Barrymore, Vivien Leigh, Edmund Gwenn, Griffith Jones, C. V. France, Morton Selten, Claude Gillingwater, Tully Marshall, Walter Kingsford, Robert Coote, Peter Croft, Noel Hewlett and Edmund Breon. Directed in England by Jack Conway. Previewed Tuesday, February 15. At Loew's Palace Theater.

"A Yank at Oxford" is easily the most satisfactory vehicle for his talents in which Robert Taylor has appeared. It is a fast-moving and thoroughly amusing story of undergraduate life at England's great institution of higher learning in which the Oxonian legends are carefully safeguarded without sacrifice of humor, romance or action.

Taylor is cast as Lee Sheridan, a fresh-water collegian whose chief eminence among the "small-towners" is derived from the athletic fields rather than the classroom. Through the interest of the dean he is given a scholarship at Oxford and carries abroad all of the flip cocksureness he has been accustomed to toss about his native village. It doesn't go down quite so easily with the Britishers and the youthful Mr. Sheridan is put through an exquisitely humiliating course of sprouts that should have quelled his arrogant spirit, but didn't.

Interwoven with this basic tale are sidelights on Oxford that probably are authentic, the precarious sort of attachments that spring from the romantic inclinations of the "college widow"—who happens to be a married woman with an enduring interest in handsome young men not so old as her smug and homely husband—and the genuine affection that springs up between Lee and Molly Beaumont, whose brother is the university's renegade.

Opportunities For All.

From these diverse ingredients has been compounded a sprightly charade that affords unusual opportunities for practically everybody in the cast—and it is a long one.

His work in this picture should go far toward establishing Robert Taylor as an adroit comedian as well as an actor who possesses traits of honest worth with which he has not always been credited. His forte, it has seemed to me, always has been the fresh sort of comedy that he contributed to "Small Town Girl," with Janet Gaynor, back in 1936, and now repeats in this picture. He seems to do pretty well as an athlete, too, on both sides of the Atlantic.

Maureen O'Sullivan is equally effective as Molly, and Vivien Leigh, a pert young thing with a turned-up nose, is perfectly cast as the "temptation" that threatens the scholastic standing of a large segment of Oxford's susceptible enrollment. Edmund Gwenn, Griffith Jones and Robert Coote are among the British players who do most to make the film atmospherically true and Edward Rigby contributes a fine character portrayal in one of the best, even if one of the minor, roles in the play.

As the doting father, who finally brings things out right side up for his son, who is about to be expelled from the school, Lionel Barrymore has another opportunity to impersonate the sort of character he does best. The American touch is strengthened by such veterans as Tully Marshall, Claude Gillingwater and Walter Kinsford.

Scenically, "A Yank at Oxford" is a handsome thing to see and it has been beautifully photographed under the skillful direction of Jack Conway, a Hollywood expert of notable attainment.

Auxiliary Features.

Also on the bill at the Palace this week is a new release in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "What Do You Think?" series of short-reel subjects, in which propounded puzzles in psychology and natural phenomena. The present item concerns the love affair of a young woman who is grief stricken at the death of her husband, a great violinist and is rescued from her despair by a scientific oddity that startles her back to an interest in life. Your own solution of the problem will be as good as any other.

"News of the Day" and added house attractions complete the supplementaries of a feature that will serve to contradict a great many of the things you have been hearing about Robert Taylor. Better than that, it will afford an interval of wholesome entertainment that any audience out for a good time ought to enjoy to the limit.

Trans-Lux

News, news, laughs and more laughs, is the order of the day at the Trans-Lux Theater this week—plus some magnificent shots of London in the always welcomé travel feature.

When it comes to laughs, of course there are Charlie McCarthy, Donald Duck and Lew Lahr, the last in the best yet of his funny escapades.

Uppermost in the long list of last minute news are the showings of Austria in a state of chaos due to the threatened Nazi control. In the first Soviet general election Stalin is elected, and Tibet searches for a new Lama. The Flying Fortresses take off on their successful flight to Buenos Aires, by way of Peru, a 6,000-mile flight, commanded by Col. Olds. There are plenty of fashion shots, styling many dresses in cotton fabrics. Plenty of feminine pulchritude is exhibited as a Broadway photographer selects the 12 most beautiful show girls.

Thrills are available through the showing of Cuba's observance of the fortieth anniversary of the sinking of the United States battleship Maine, that well known spark that started the Spanish-American War.

Donald Duck scores a knockout in Disney's "Self Control." A word on the London travel picture would not be out of the way. In addition to showing the changing of the guards at Buckingham Palace and the usual shots of Trafalgar Square and the Tower of London, there are many rare and out of the way pictures of this ancient and fascinating capital.

Likes Posies.

Ann Sheridan has curtains, counterpanes, pillows and other feminine gew-gaws of her boudoir adorned with 3,436 tiny roses all made by hand by Conchita Alvarez, who was Ann's nurse during her infancy.

Jim Adamick Pounds Way to Victory Over Harry Thomas

The Washington Post Sports

This Morning..

By Walter Haight.

One afternoon, about 900 B. C. if memory serves, Thesus, an Athens big shot, was lolling around on a davenport. He had tried to start a dice game and failed. Nobody would fade him for the Isle of Crete and this Grecian blade was not a piker. He wanted to play a tip that Ulysses had picked up from a mermaid, but the Athens police were "hot" at the time and the results weren't coming in at Thesus' favorite bookie joint.

HAIGHT.

Now Hotsy-Totsy Thesus' sporting blood was boiling. He craved action so he sat down and thought up a little game. It consisted of two gladiators perched on stones so close together that their noses touched. At a signal, they started punching at each other. Of course they didn't bruise easily and the lack of gore did not satisfy Thesus, staunch friend of Local No. 413, Union Grave Diggers of Athens.

Thesus then called for his big brass and leather man. Out of that conference came a couple of pairs of gloves that consisted of bands of leather with spikes protruding along the knuckles. It was a beautiful thought. Then he ordered a couple of fresh gladiators and they proceeded to put button holes in each other's skulls. Some fun, eh kid?

That's how the fight game began. (Reference, Homer's Iliad, All-Sports Record Book and Haight's Parlor Games of Ancient Greece.)

• • • •

Now Thesus, installed as the first Goldie Ahearn in history, also was the big cash and carry man of that period. When he bet on fighters they stayed bet. His coin made a lot of shady favorites around Athens and the fight game has popped up with a stack of false choices since.

• • • •

Perhaps your memory isn't as keen as this book I have here on the desk, so I'll start with John L. Sullivan. "My old friend, Johnny," as J. F. Scott used to call him, stepped into the ring with Jim Corbett a 1-to-4 choice and Corbett stepped out with the title. The fight dandies made Corbett a 3-to-5 choice over Fitzsimmons and the latter took the crown.

Jim Jeffries came along and the wise guys wagered 2 to 1 that Fitzsimmons wouldn't say "Uncle," but he did. And when Jeffries came out of retirement to try to "White Hope" Jack Johnson, the odds were 7 to 10 that he would succeed.

Johnson entered the ring a 1-to-3 favorite over Jess Willard that day in Havana. Just to be consistently with the champion, the betters laid 6 to 5 that Willard would beat Jack Dempsey. The future "eat and drink" man hung the okus on Willard and you could get 5 to 2 that Dempsey was a better mudder than Tunney in the rain that night in Philadelphia, and this was disproved. When Jack Sharkey defeated Max Schmeling for a clear title, the favorite players got a break. The Bostonian won as a 5-to-9 shot.

• • • •

However, the scheme of things bounded right back into order when Sharkey was pitted against Primo Carnera. This time Sharkey was a 1-to-3 favorite and he fought as if he should have been a 100-1 shot. When Carnera dragged his bulk out to be Baer's target, the boys were wagering 8 to 5 that the Italian would take Maxie, but he failed.

• • • •

Then came the all time betting "honey." It was 10 to 1 that Baer would pound the ears off Jim Braddock, but Maxie's signals got crossed. Joe Louis reversed the order somewhat by being the choice over Jim Braddock.

Louis had a lot of trouble with Tommy Farr, a long shot, and now the boys are talking about 6 to 1 and 10 to 1 that he will beat Nathan Mann next Wednesday night. Now I don't know a whole lot about these two horse races, but somehow I can't get it out of my mind that Louis is a well-fed fighter and that Mann is a hungry fighter. If I can get ten slugs to one slug I might take it.

On paper, in the record books and along Ninth street there is every reason to believe that Louis will take care of Mann. However, Mann hasn't had a taste of ordering ten suits at a time or buying bonds. In a fistic sense, he's still walking home from work.

Braddock was hungry the night he fought Baer. Mann will be hungry when he fights Louis. True, some guys just stay hungry. But I say, be careful of a hungry 10-1 shot.

Columbus U. Boxers Win 5-3 Decision

Fight Uphill Battle With Appalachian Teachers at Turner's Arena.

By Bob Garrison.

Forced to fight uphill all the way, the Columbus University boxing Explorers scaled a rough, winding trail to conquer a formidable Appalachian State Teachers' College clan last night at Turner's Arena, 5-3.

One thousand persons were treated to some of the best slugging seen in college matches here this season as the local team maintained its seven-year undefeated record. The Boone, North Carolina, team consisted of a rugged group of mountain boys who punched for keeps but couldn't land enough in the heavyweight clashes.

For it was in the last two bouts, the 175-pound and heavyweight matches, that the Seventeenth streeters posted their decisive victories. They started off well enough, winning the first bout, but soon fell into a gorge that took all night to escape.

Explorers' Second Victory.

It was the second victory for Jim McNamara's team of lawyers and accountants, who defeated DeSales last week, without dropping a single bout.

Two draws that saw one Explorer profit by the illegal tactics of his opponent and another take a bad beating for his efforts, aided the visitors to go into a 3½-to-1½ lead after the first five matches.

Jim Brown, Columbus heavyweight, entered the ring for the last bout with his team in possession of a 4-3 lead and in need of a victory to avoid a 4-4 tie.

Brown won his bout, defeating Len Wilson, who was previously undefeated in collegiate competition, and in so doing was instrumental in producing an old-fashioned toe-to-toe slugging brawl.

Both Hit Hard.

Lou Hayman, former Central High athlete, won a hit-and-miss affair from Dick Potter, the Appalachian 175-pounder, that broke a 3-3 tie and led to the Columbus victory.

Bill Crum, Columbus, 155-pound-

G. W. Quint Wins, 44-41; Shakes Jinx

St. John's Bows in Torrid Game; O'Brien Is Star.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Feb. 18.—George Washington University's quintet tied a large tin can to the tail of the jinx which has been dogging the footsteps of every District five in New York City play this season, and chased it clean out of DeGray gymn tonight. The Colonials, flashing a smooth attack which emphasized deadly accuracy from every part of the floor, vanquished St. John's University, 44 to 41, in a thriller which had a capacity crowd of 1,000 limp at the final gun.

Leading 27 to 21 at the half, the Colonials were forced to fight through every pulsating second of the second half in order to hold the Redmen in check. Tommy O'Brien, making his last local appearance in the buff and blue livery of George Washington, made the night a memorable one for the Colonials. Not only did O'Brien lead the Colonials in their individual scoring with 13 points but he sparked virtually every scoring play.

Sid Silkowitz, returning to the scene of his cage activities as a schoolboy player, was second with 10 points, while Jack Butterworth and Bob Faris followed with 8 and 7 respectively. Faris, incidentally was the only player to be banished on fouls during the entire contest. Bob was forced to leave the game early in the second half.

Ed McKeever, St. John's sophomore sensation, was the game's high scoring star with 20 points. Little Ralph Dolgoff, as slick a ballhandler as the Colonials have encountered all season, tallied 12. Between the two they made it highly interesting for the Colonials all night.

Faris set the keynote in the first half minute, scoring the initial goal of the game. From there, right down to the half-time intermission, the Colonials stayed out in front. Faris sank three goals from the floor and one foul shot to lead his teammates with seven points during the half. The pace was blistering with St. John's striving desperately to prevent the Colonials from amassing too great an advantage.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Feb. 18.—Jimmy Adamick, a tall, dark and handsome young man crossed Harry Thomas, pugilistic path tonight and after ten ruinious rounds of old-fashioned, back-room belting, conquered the rugged veteran before an enthusiastic audience at Madison Square Garden. The decision was booed for at least 10 minutes.

Hailed as another Jack Dempsey, a willing mixer with dynamite in both gloves, the victor nailed his man with both fists to the head and body often enough to floor the average heavyweight, but Thomas wasn't average tonight. He gave young Adamick the toughest battle he's had thus far, and staged a "Braddock finish" that many thought should have given him at least a draw.

Adamick Takes Lead.

Adamick amassed a comfortable lead in the first hix rounds which enabled him to withstand Thomas' closing rally in the final tabulation of points. Once, in the fifth, he had his opponent on the verge of a knockout, after himself being within a punch of the same fate. They stood toe to toe and slugged away throughout every round, Adamick boring in and Thomas refusing to give ground.

There were no knockdowns, although Adamick, swinging wildly while desperately trying for a knockout, missed with a left in the ninth, and missed so completely he turned completely around and slipped to one knee. But he was up without a count.

Not until the ninth round did Thomas give ground, a terrific right to the head forcing him to clinch. His right eye, cut in the second round, was puffed and swollen, and his knees wobbled precariously as the young, muscular and finely trained Eagle Bend belter dogged his footsteps. Adamick rocked him with three consecutive rights to the head, and the veteran had to clinch for safety. The bell saved him from a possible knockdown.

Adamick Is Staggered.

His eyes blinked and he tried vainly to cover as Thomas, fighting with the power of a madman, tore into him again, pumping both fists to the head and body. But Adamick refused to go down. He shot a wild left from his half-crouching posture that cracked up against Thomas' ribs and temporarily halted him. But Thomas, the deafening roar of the crowd pleading for a knockout ringing in his ears, outgeneraled his man and staggered him with another looping right to the jaw. Adamick refused to give ground, took the punch and was throwing both fists wildly at the bell.

Thomas Revamps Plans.

Adamick got off to a flying start, spearing Hammering Harry with a long left jab that reddened his nose, and right cross to the head that ripped open a small cut over the right eyebrow. Thomas stood up with him, toe to toe and slugged but got the worst of it.

Thomas revamped his battle plans hurriedly between rounds, and carried the fight to the youngster in the second, beating him to most of the punches and scoring heavily with a right to the head. Adamick was a sucker for the right, but took it in good style and continued to come back for more.

Thomas lost his best round, the third, on a foul, sending several punches below the belt. They had no apparent effect on Jimmy, but he took an awful shellacking during the session. Thomas pounded him about the head with both hands and worked like a buzz-saw trying to put over a knockout punch. Adamick's tough hide absorbed the punishment, however, and as the fourth opened he was on the pitching end.

Billy Beauhuld, of Jersey City, won a unanimous decision over Irving Eldridge, of the Bronx, in the eight-round semi-final which followed the main bout. Beauhuld scaled 135¾ to Eldridge's 134.

Adamick put everything he had in his blows, used every punch in his repetoire in the eighth, striving desperately for a knockout. He banged Thomas about the body with both fists, driving him to the ropes, and whaling away at the head with both hands. Thomas' experience saved him from hitting the deck, but he was in distress at the bell and extremely worried.

Jimmy Vaughn, of Cleveland, 138¾, fought a draw with Al Roth, of New York's Bronx, 137½, in an eight-round preliminary. Vaughn looked to have a slight punching advantage but Roth was more aggressive. There were no knockdowns.

Other preliminary results: Joe de Jesus, Puerto Rico, 133½, won decision from Sammy Santillo, Paterson, N. J., 134½, four rounds; Tony Martellano, Brooklyn, 139½, defeated Bobby Carlton, Harlem, 138½, four rounds; Sammy Julian, Brooklyn, 137, won on technical knockout from Luther White, New York, 137, in second round.

St. John's to Play Special Game for Trip to Big Event

Local Team Will Meet Philadelphia Quint in Game to Raise Funds for Chicago Journey.

St. John's city champion five, which has been boomed as Washington's representative in the National Catholic Prep tournament in Chicago ever since it started a cleanup of local opposition, yesterday was virtually assured of a title trip to the Windy City.

Coach Gene Augustefer has obtained the Catholic University gymnasium for the night of February 28, on which date the Johnnies will meet the famed La Salle High School, of Philadelphia, in a game to raise funds for the Western trek.

Although La Salle has not yet accepted an invitation to invade the Capital, St. John's officials last night said an acceptance almost certainly would be received Monday.

This contest with Philadelphia's outstanding scholastic team not only promises to make possible St. John's entry in the tournament but also to determine what success the Johnnies will be able to achieve therein. La Salle last year was the runner-up in the tournament which draws the better teams from the Middle West as well as the East.

The previous year, the Pennsylvania school, which like St. John's is a Christian Brother institution, captured the consolation tourney which embraces all the outfits eliminated from the championship play. With such a record in its last two appearances in Chicago, La Salle figures to offer the smooth Cadets as strong opposition as it would receive in the tournament.

La Salle, according to information from Philadelphia is one of the greatest schoolboy quintets ever developed in the City of Brotherly Love, having won 57 of 60 games over a three-year span. Although St. John's can not match that record over a corresponding period of time, it can point to an unscratched escutcheon this year. In 18 encounters, Augustefer's lads have annexed all but one, losing that to the powerful Georgetown Frosh which is not in its class.

Paul Waner, Jurges Sign

Pirate and Cub Stars Come Into Fold.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Feb. 18.—Paul Waner, batting star of the Pittsburgh Pirates, signed a contract for the 1938 season today after a 2½-hour conference with resident William E. Benswanger.

The amount was not disclosed, but it is known he is the highest-paid player on the club, probably drawing between $15,000 and $17,500.

Chicago.—The Cubs' holdout worries were ended today when Shortstop Bill Jurges' signed contract was received at the offices of the National League baseball club. Terms were not announced, but Charles Drake, assistant to the president, said Jurges signed the first contract offered him after refusing it once.

The shortstop earlier had notified Owner Phil Wrigley he would bring the unsigned paper to Chicago next week to negotiate. Outfielder Frank Demaree wired acceptance of terms yesterday.

Eastern Wins, 35-26; Riders Defeat Tech

By Jack Munhall.

Eastern assured itself of at least a tie for its fourth inter-high basketball title in five years last night, whipping a stubborn Central team, 35-26, at Tech gym. It was Central's ninth straight series loss.

Earlier, some 750 spectators had watched Roosevelt's lads seize undisputed possession of second place, breaking a deadlock with idle Western, by defeating Tech, 26-15. Roosevelt also retained its mathematical chance of sharing the championship with the Lincoln Parkers and possibly with Western.

Eastern now has captured eight victories in nine starts and has only to knock off Western to clinch the crown. They meet next Wednesday.

Both of the games were fairly hard fought but both finished as expected. The only surprise was Roosevelt's nine-point margin over Tech for the T-Streeters were expected to offer stiffer opposition on the basis of their upset last week of Western.

For three quarters the contest was close and marked by some of the most accurate long-distance shooting seen in the series. At one stage Morton Littman, Tech's sharpshooting forward, sank three lengthy set heaves in that many tries and it was by dint of his efforts that Tech was able to make as good a showing as it did against the smoothly working Riders.

Littman, entering the game as a substitute in the second period accounted for all of Tech's field goals throughout that period.

Tech was first to score when Blank dropped in a foul. Roosevelt then drew out in front on successive baskets by Al Miller, Louis West, the star of the game, and Hymie Perlo and led 6-1 at the end of the opening stanza.

The score favored the winners,

'37 Champ Entered in Two Events

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 18.—War Admiral's long awaited return to the races takes place at Hialeah Park tomorrow but whether it'll be in the mile and an eighth of the $7,500 McLennan Memorial Handicap or a seven-furlong dash, probably will not be known until a few hours before post time.

The 1937 3-year-old champion, outstanding favorite to win the $50,000 Widener Challenge Cup on March 5, was entered in both events today. Trainer George Conway would like to start his ace in the longer race but Owner Samuel D. Riddle is said to prefer the sprint because the Admiral would have less weight to carry.

War Admiral has been assigned top weight of 130 pounds for the McLennan while the conditions of the sprint, worth only $1,100, let him in with 122. His rivals in either race include many of the outstanding horses in training at Hialeah.

In the McLennan, the son of Man o' War is asked to give from 14 to 29 pounds to 18 rivals, including Felix Spatola's Wise Prince, Go Home and Maeriel from DeWitt Page's Maemere Farm, the Wheatley Stable's Teufel, Mary Hirsch's No Sir, Mrs. Emil Denemark's Cotito and War Minstrel, and the Millsdale Stable's Infantry. Wise Prince, a sprinter of repute, is the second highest weight under 116 pounds, while Infantry has been allotted 114.

Infantry also is entered in the shorter race and, with W. W. Taylor's Sir Oracle, has been handicapped 6 pounds under the Admiral. Other contenders in the sprint field of 12 include Caballero II, Maedic, Palamede, Stubbs and Lady Higloss.

Fourteen Stars Entered In San Carlos Handicap

Charles S. Howard's 1937 handicap champion, Seabiscuit, and Jerome Louchheim's Pompoon, one of the ranking three-year-olds in the country last year, hook up for the first time, and as the stand-out favorites for the $100,000 handicap March 5, dominate a brilliant field of aspirants.

Leading challengers to the betting favorites, Seabiscuit and Pompoon, were J. A. Manfuso's Aneroid, E. H. Bryson's Calumet Dick, Bert Baroni's Star Shadow and Lawrence Barker's foreign importation, Sahri II.

Eagles Beat Jacket Five

By the Associated Press.

Ashland, Va., Feb. 18.—Dutch Schultze, brilliant American University guard, led his teammates to a 33-to-31 victory tonight over Randolph-Macon's basketball quintet. It was the first victory for American University over the Yellow Jackets in nine years.

Randolph-Macon was off to a flying start in the opening minutes of play and led the way during the first half. American University trailed, 18 to 12, at intermission.

As the game moved into the second half, Schulze broke through the Yellow Jacket defense to drop the ball through the basket time after time. He led his team with a total of 15 points.

Georgetown's Freshman Riflemen Beat Riders

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGHT INTRUDER, $6.50, $5.20, $3.70; PAUL SCARLET, $7.90, $4.60; WES, $3.10.

NIGHT INTRUDER, slow to find his stride, improved his position gradually while circling the field in the last three furlongs and wore PAUL SCARLET down in the final drive. PAUL SCARLET away well, moved to the front with a rush in the run down the backstretch, saved ground the remainder of the trip, but could not withstand the winner's challenge. WES quickest to begin, went prominently all the way, moved up stoutly entering the stretch, then faltered when the real issue came.

Daily Double, Jack Horner and Night Intruder, Paid $31.90.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:02. Off 3:04. Winner, R. Bradley's ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BECKY BATES, $6.20, $4.30, $2.90; SUBURBANITE, $4.90, $3.10; WISE FOX, $2.80.

BECKY BATES, away forwardly, was pinched slightly on the turn out of the backstretch, came around the leaders entering the stretch, and took command after a mild drive and won with something in reserve. SUBURBANITE displayed good speed and raced PINE FRILLS into defeat, drew out enternig the stretch, but faltered in the final drive. WISE FOX, under punishment early, refused to extend himself.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:32. Winner, C. Ponce's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FOUR SPOT, $7.70, $4.80, $3.60; NIGHT RAVEN, $7.70, $5.00; PUNDIT, $5.20.

FOUR SPOT, slow as usual to get going, began to better his position between the field leaving the backstretch, swung to the extreme outside coming into the stretch, closed determinedly and wore the leaders down in the last strides. NIGHT RAVEN, breaking alertly, displayed the most speed while saving ground and held on gamely in the final drive. PUNDIT, well up all the way, finished stoutly, but was unable to better his position.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Class C. For 3-year-old fillies; allowances. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:02. Winner, A. F. East's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TILAANA, $10.50, $4.50, $3.90; MAEAYRES, $5.20, $4.20; JOIN US, $6.30.

TILAANA began fast, and setting a swift pace under light restraint in the early running, opened up a winning lead when straightened into the stretch and held her opposition safe thereafter. MAEAYRES moved into contention rapidly while obtaining clear passage in the first quarter mile, made a game bid on the stretch turn, but could not reach the winner. JOIN US, a forward contender all the way, outpaced UPSLALA in the final drive.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. The Fort Myers, For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:36. MARCLOUD, on the inside and forced to ease back repeatedly for six furlongs, slipped through next to the inner rail entering the stretch and took command, but was unable to keep stride with the winner in the stretch drive. POMPEY'S PILLAR gradually improved his position in the final half mile and outlasted EUDIE H.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWAHILI, $12.70, $6.50, $5.00; TERPSICHORE, $6.30, $4.70; MASKER, $3.60.

SWAHILI broke very slowly and was taken under restraint going to the first turn and trailed the field until the three-furlong pole, where he began to move into contention on the outside, and continuing courageously wore TERPSICHORE down in the last strides. The latter took command at the start, displayed excellent speed and courage when challenged, but could not stave off the winner. MASKER, a best contender for the entire trip, faltered slightly through the stretch, yet held the others safe.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:08½. Local Colleges Face Full Sports Program Today

Pitt Boxing, Court Teams Are Invaders

Basketball Game With Hoya Five in Afternoon to Open Card.

By Bob Garrison.

Another of those big Saturday sport shows is scheduled for the Washington scene today. It runs on an eight-hour-day basis, and will be presented in four acts.

Local college athletes will punch their cards "in" at 2 o'clock this afternoon and will not punch "out" until somewhere around 10 o'clock this evening.

In between, they'll confine their punching to the army of invading athletes, composing two Pittsburgh University, one Dickinson and one Coast Guard Academy teams.

Feature of the day's activity will be the Catholic University boxers' final appearance of the season at Brookland gym against the University of Pittsburgh swing team. The Cardinals will be seeking their fifth consecutive triumph, having defeated Western Maryland, Maryland, Duke and Villanova, in that order.

Meet in Afternoon.

To Georgetown's basketball team will befall the honor of opening the show meeting Pittsburgh's basketball team in the curtain raiser at Tech High gym at 2 p. m. The Hoyas will be seeking their fourth Eastern Inter-Collegiate Conference victory in their eighth start.

Out at Maryland University's massive Ritchie Stadium two injury-plagued Terrapin teams will perform in the other duo of acts. The Maryland mittmen are scheduled to face the Coast Guard Academy boxers in the feature of the final College Park double-header of the season, while the Old Line cagers oppose Dickinson in the first game.

Catholic U. vs. Navy.

While the above-mentioned players are performing for the benefit of local fans, two other Washington teams will be seeing action on the road. Catholic University's basketballers will take a bus ride to the Naval Academy this afternoon, while American U.'s five will be playing Hampden-Sydney, down in Virginia.

Four Redbird boxers will be singing their swansongs in the Catholic U.-Pittsburgh matches tonight. Coach Eddie LaFond will watch with pride as Sully Grecox, Leo Katalinas, Capt. Fred Mix and Tex Guinan will be making their last appearances for the Brookland school.

Three Local Boys Start.

The second edition of Pittsburgh power will be the competition of the Georgetown Hoyas, who will start three local boys in an attempt to register their second victory of the season over the Panthers, having defeated them previously in the Smoky City.

Maryland's boxers will be fighting without a representative of the 175-pound class, as Ralph "Blackie" Pearson, senior, will be lost to the team for the remainder of the season, due to a broken nose sustained in practice this week.

No forfeit will be necessary, however, as Coach Mickey McClearnon, of the Life-Savers, refused to accept decision in that fashion and informed Heine Miller yesterday, upon arriving in town, that it would be a seven-match meet. It will be recalled that Maryland did the same thing for Rutgers, last year, in their meet.

The injury-sickness jinx also took a whack at the Terp basketball team, when George "Dutch" Knepley, captain of the Terp cagers, was stricken with ptomaine poisoning and confined to bed by his physician. He will be able to play in the Southern Conference tournament, ten days hence, however. Milt Mulitz, former Tech High star, will sub for the Pennsylvanian tonight against Dickinson.

Catholic U.-Pittsburgh.

er, and Earl Smith, fought to a fierce draw. Crum landed often in the opening round, but tired in the last two. A straight left that hit its mark constantly aided Smith.

A three-round beating proved too much for Bert Parod, Columbus 145-pounder, who finally collapsed for a count of nine in the third round before dropping a decision to Garnett Clark. Both hit hard.

George Marker, 115-pounder, floored his man early in the first round for a nine count and then led the fighting all the way to win a decision over Harrill Young. Appalachian State bantam weight.

Appalachian's first victory came at the expense of the veteran Columbus 125-pounder, Ray Morse, who held his own for two rounds before running into a series of right-hands in the finale. Two of them all but tore his head off his shoulders and won the decision for his foe, George Corn.

The 135-pound bout resulted in a draw, although Andra Nadeau, Appalachian entry, had the better of it in exchanges with his towering opponent, Jim Willis. He refused to heed Referee Charlie Reynold's warning to break clean and as a result lost many points for infighting tactics.

Heavyweight—Jim Brown (Columbus) defeated Len Wilson.

Upsala Five Beats Wilson College

Upsala College, of Orange, N. J., last night whipped Wilson Teachers College, 44 to 25, in a basketball game played in the local gymnasium.

Starting slowly, the visitors led, 21 to 14, at half-time, but, paced by the deadly shooting of Blaze and Snyder, steadily forced ahead in the third and fourth quarters, and won easily.

Marion Miley Victor In Orlando Tourney

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 18 (U.P.).—Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., today celebrated her twenty-fourth birthday by defeating Frances Owen, former Florida champion, from Jacksonville, and going to the finals of the mid-Florida women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, defeated Mrs. Archie McLave, Hastings-on-the-Hudson, 5 and 4. The two winners will meet tomorrow in the finals.

Gevinson Points for Knockout In Bout With Dunne Monday

Capital Southpaw Says He Intends to Flatten Leonard's Protege and Go After Title.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Puffing gently, like a black-bellied locomotive being groomed for the 4:05 Chicago run, Lou Gevinson yesterday paused long enough after a strenuous workout to inform all within earshot that he regards Monday night's bout with Irish Eddie Dunne as his first step toward the lightweight championship of the world.

The swarthy Jewish boy whose utterances would make an Egyptian sphinx sound like Herr Golden Ahearn in one of his exuberant moods, nearly floored his audience by the remark.

"It looks like the featherweights gave me the run-around," he said, "but as a lightweight I expect to fight 'em all, and beat 'em all. Dunne is the first on my list and I'm not going out to win by a decision. I want a knockout."

Gevinson's manager, Matt Twomey, recovered from the shock of hearing his boy's statement in time to beam proudly at the small assemblage and nod approvingly.

"See there," he said, "didja hear that? This man means business. He'll take 'em all and that includes the champion."

"I'm not getting any younger," interrupted Gevinson, an ageing gentleman of 23 summers, "and I want that title before I'm too old to cash in on it. I want it quick. The sooner the better."

Gevinson's remarks almost left Twomey spellbound and speechless, which should give you some idea of the boy's modesty. But he said it, and said it convincingly, as if he meant every syllable.

More convincing, however, was The full card, completed yesterday, has Mamakos vs. Frankie Valez in a six-round semifinal and three four-round bouts. The line-up will be Alex Franklin vs. Johny Miller, colored welterweights; Bill Temes vs. Johnny Gilley, and Mike Morton vs. Lou Transparetti.

Eastern, which always seems to have trouble with Central no matter how weak the Mount Pleasanters are, ran true to form and was not overly impressive in winning. In fact in the first quarter Central actually outplayed the Lincoln Parkers to grab a 3-0 advantage which it held until Howard (Soup) Hancock, Eastern's high point scorer with 11 markers, sank the first of his five baskets.

Hogsett, Milhalic Sign Nat Contracts

Two new names were added to the Washington Club's baseball roster last night when Pitcher Elon Hogsett and infielder Johnny Milhalic returned their signed contracts to headquarters. Hogsett, a submarine southpaw twirler, was obtained from St. Louis in the deal that sent Ed Linke to the Mound City Club, while Milhalic understudied Buddy Myer last season.

Bethesda Girls Win.

Bethesda - Chevy Chase High School's girl basketball team routed Richard Montgomery, 41 to 16, yesterday in a game played on the Bethesda floor. The winners led, 26 to 8, at half, and never was the ultimate decision in doubt.

Mildred Curtis, with 8 points, and Ruth Williams, with 1 less, led Bethesda, while Beverly Martin chalked up 11, to take high scoring honors for the losers.

Occidentals Take Match

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Willimantic, Conn., Feb. 18.—Paced by Joe Freschi's 166—661, the Occidental Restaurant team smashed its way to a brilliant victory over the Connecticut Blue Ribbons here tonight with a five-game score of 3,182 to 3,129.

The 53-pin margin of victory was piled up in the final five frames of last game after the Blue Ribbons had caught the Occidentals at the half-way point. Losing the first game, the super District of Columbia bowling aggregation won the final four games, but it took a sensational charge near the end of the hectic battle for the Occidentals to win after holding a 45-pin lead for the first four games.

Busy Sports Card Set for Navy Today

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 18.—With the boxing team ending its schedule at Syracuse tomorrow, the Navy's home program reaches its climax for the winter season with five varsity matches and as many for the plebes, features being basketball with Catholic University, wrestling with Harvard and swimming with Columbia.

To complete the day St. John's will stage a double-header of basketball in the evening, the varsity meeting City College of New York in the Johnnies' most important home game of the season, while the B Squad and Gilman School will play as a curtain raiser.

Other varsity events at the Naval Academy are fencing with Cornell and a small bore rifle match with Yale. The plebes meet the Virginia freshmen in the ring, wrestle with Blair Academy, fence with Penn Charter, swim against Baltimore City College and have a gym match with Emerson High, of Union City, N. J.

Though without the services of its captain, Ed Luby, 155-pounder, and Jack Shepherd, 125-pounder, both of whom have bad colds, Coach Spike Webb has assembled a powerful team for the match against the Orange fighters.

Syracuse was the team which ended the Navy's 12-year run of success in the boxing ring and the Middies always hunger for victory against the Orange team. However, the Navy is well ahead in the series.

3:30—Swimming, varsity vs. Columbia.

7:30 p. m.—Basketball, St. John's B. Squad vs. Gilman School.

8:30 p. m.—Basketball, St. John's vs. New York City College.

G. W. Quint Wins, 44-41

play of the second half and brought St. John's up to 27-25.

A few moments later St. John's forged into the lead for the first time 30 to 29, when McKeever, unguarded for a moment, dropped in a long set shot. Arnie Auerbach, substituting for Faris, hauled Washington into the lead, again 31-30, but the persistent McKeever caged another field goal and St. John's went into the lead. When Auerbach tallied George Washington surged into a lead which they maintained except for a 38-38 deadlock with six minutes to play.

Butterworth tossed in a beautiful pivot shot at the 17 minute mark. O'Brien kept the rim hot with another of his long shots and with one minute to go the Colonials led 42 to 38. McKeever was fouled by Garber and converted. Silkowitz then sewed up the game by planting the ball through the strings for a 44 to 39 count with half a minute to go. McKeever's lay-up shot for St. John's with about 20 seconds to play, was a gallant but futile gesture and brought the final count to 44 to 41.

Redskins' Officials Will Try to Land Leemans at Loop Meeting Today

And in that city of brotherly love, they hoped, somehow, someway to maneuver a deal with the New York Giants that will bring Washington its own Tuffy Leemans next season.

Since Cliff Battles decided to quit pro ball for his coaching berth with Lou Little at Columbia University, the Capital's professional football fans are letting it be known in no uncertain terms that they want Leemans in a Redskin uniform.

Marshall, who gets that far-away look in his eyes—as though he were watching Baugh passing and Leemans carrying the ball for the Redskins—every time the former George Washington University star's name is mentioned, is just as warm to the idea as any fan.

But the one big obstacle that may prevent such a dream from coming true is the New York Giants. They like Alphone, too. He's played two seasons for them since leaving the Colonials in 1935 and has been very satisfactory as a ball carrier indeed.

The first year he was the league's leading ground gainer. Although injured part of last season, he reeled off plenty of yardage whenever he played. Marshall knows he'd just about be doubling the drawing power of the Redskins for home games if he could acquire Leemans. He realizes that half the persons who went to see George Washington play while he was with George Washington went solely for the purpose of watching the transplanted Wisconsin boy.

He remembers the opening game last year when Leemans, in a Giant uniform, got a bigger hand than Sammy Baugh or any other member of the local team. In short, Leemans is just what the doctor ordered for the backfield that will be seeking to score enough goals to repeat its successful championship quest without the circuit's leading ground gainer.

Of course there will be other things of interest to Marshall at the meeting. Among them are three rule changes in league operations that he will propose and the formation of the 1938 schedule, which will be drafted tomorrow.

The Washington laundry owner-sportsman will propose that post-season games be outlawed by the league with the exception of one game in which he would allow the championship team to participate. He also will suggest that officials be paid by the league instead of the present method where-by they are hired by and responsible to the home team.

The number of men on a team roster that now is set at a 35 maximum will be cut to 30 if Marshall, also, has his way about it.

It is understood that Branch Rickey, general manager of the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team, will apply for a franchise in the league for his city. There are now ten teams in the circuit and it is doubtful if the owners will vote to admit another club.

Before leaving, last night, Marshall announced that he had signed the first member of the championship Redskins to a 1938 contract. Charlie Malone, right end, signed yesterday afternoon for his fifth year in professional football. He was a student at Texas A. & M. before turning to the money game for a career . . .

U. S. Steel Plans 2½ Millions More Common

Change From $100 to No Par Value Clears Way for New Financing.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 18.—Directors of the United States Steel Corporation today authorized changes in the common stock of the corporation from $100 par to no par value and an increase in the authorized common from 12,500,000 to 15,000,000 shares, thus clearing the way for further financing when it may be deemed necessary. The corporation recently borrowed $50,000,000 from banks in New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh. Stockholders also will be asked to authorize bonds, debentures and convertible obligations. It was stated that no immediate new financing is contemplated.

The corporation statement said that in changing the common stock from $100 par value to no par value the directors proposed that the stated capital for outstanding common stock will be $75 a share, thus decreasing the capital and increasing the capital surplus of the corporation by $217,581,300 to $298,831,321.42.

Earned Surplus Stands.

In a letter to stockholders, to be dated February 21, Myron C. Taylor, chairman, explained that the directors contemplate reducing the item of intangible assets appearing in the consolidated balance sheet to a nominal value of $1 by charging the amount of $260,368,520.53 against the capital surplus, leaving a capital surplus of $38,462,800.89. The corporation's earned surplus will not be affected by the proposed changes.

The letter points out that during the five-year period ended December 31 the corporation and its subsidiaries undertook rehabilitation and new construction to the extent of about $250,000,000, of which $225,000,000 was provided from resources without the sale of any securities. At the beginning of this year $80,000,000 of this amount had not yet been expended.

Lumbermen's Mutual Establishes Reserve

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Preparing for any eventuality that may result from the present uncertain security markets, the Lumbermens Mutual Casualty Co., Chicago carrier under the management of James S. Kemper, has established voluntary reserves sufficient to absorb a decline in the market value of stocks to the lowest point reached in the depression year of 1932, its statement released today disloses.

Further evidence of the procedure being followed by the company is found in its liquid condition, over 61 per cent of all assets being in cash and Government bonds, mostly short term.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

By the Associated Press.

The position of the Treasury on February 16:

Receipts, $71,307,859.49; expenditures, $65,213,052.84; balance, $3,015,356,332.44; customs receipts for the month, $12,636,175.19.

Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1), $3,756,120,211.84; expenditures, $4,736,842,892.09, including $1,268,463,985.72 of emergency expenditures; excess of expenditures, $979,722,680.25; gross debt, $37,596,665,833.43, an increase of $8,842,132.50 above the previous day; gold assets, $12,780,853,059.29, including $1,213,602,937.83 of inactive gold.

Utility Bows To Holding Act

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday that the United Light & Power Co., of Colorado, Ill., has registered under the holding company act. Also registered were the United Light & Railways Co. and Con Continental Gas & Electric Corporation, both of Delaware, and both subsidiaries of the United Light & Power Co. American Light & Traction Co., another subsidiary, had previously registered. The United Light & Power System has consolidated assets of approximately $570,541,432, and gross revenues were $87,608,223 as of December 31, 1936.

The United Light & Power System includes 64 subsidiaries in Maryland, Iowa, Tennessee, Delaware, Illinois, Indiana, Connecticut, Kansas, Minnesota, Oakland, Ohio, West Virginia, Missouri, Texas, New Jersey, Michigan and Wisconsin. The system's business includes electric and natural gas service primarily while some subsidiaries operate railway, transportation, investment, real estate and other businesses. In connection with the registration, Chairman Douglas said:

"With the registration of the United Light & Power Co., of Maryland, under the holding company act, another major public utility system has chosen the course of cooperation. We regard it as an important contribution toward the elimination of obstacles to progress and to sound development in the utility industry."

Window Glass Output At 43% of Capacity

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Production of window glass in January totaled 705,721 boxes of 50 square feet each and represented 43.5 per cent of the industry's capacity, the National Association of Window Glass Manufacturers reported today. In January, 1937, output amounted to 453,565 boxes, or 27.9 per cent of capacity.

The lower rate of production a year ago was partially accounted for by suspension of production by two producers due to strikes.

Wheat Slump Follows Talk By President

White House Denial of Inflation Results in 1-1⅝ Cents Drop.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 18.—Rapid downward plunges of 2⅛ cents in wheat prices today attended the conclusion of a statement by President Roosevelt outlining his policy about commodity values.

The President's statement emphasized that the policy did not mean inflation and this was seized upon by many traders as indicating that yesterday's sharp advance of the wheat market had been effected on a mistaken basis. It was also contended that President Roosevelt's remarks today shed little light on what definite future steps as to commodity prices were to be taken by the Administration.

With only fractional rallies from the day's bottom, Chicago wheat futures at the close were 1 cent to 1⅝ cents under yesterday's finish, May, 92⅛@92⅝; July, 88⅛@88⅝; corn, ¼@⅝ down; May, 59⅜; July, 61¼@61½; oats, unchanged to ¼ off; rye, ⅝ to 1 cent drop, and provisions varying from 2 cents decline to 12 cents advance.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks and Commodities Turn Lower After Advance as President Gives Price Views.

New York, Feb. 18.—Lower prices in bonds, commodities and stocks were the answers given by the markets to the President's price-fixing views, and dollars recovered. Stock sales were approximately 800,000 shares. May wheat closed 1⅛ cents lower at 92⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks continued their forward movement in the first hour or so of trading, but after that they had too much to contend with. As a starter President Roosevelt tried to set down the rising enthusiasm for an inflationary boom in stock and commodity prices. That sent prices down 1 to 3 points from their early high plane. In the late trading the announcement that the United States Steel Corporation ih preparing to capitalize current bank borrowing added to the pressure on steel and other leading issues.

Stocks to feel the selling most keenly were those which have risen the highest recently. Deere, General Motors, Anaconda, Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Steel, Chrysler and others fell heavily. Stock which had added 1 to 3 points at the start gave up 2 or more before the close. Metals were fairly hard most of the time. Rails weakened, as did the farm implements. Building construction stocks held fairly well.

Hope Deferred.

Spring burgeoning of markets is lifting the level of feelings in Wall Street, but so far most of the ground for higher prices is cultivated by the promise of inflation coming from Washington. This week's banking statements shows some practical effect of the new policy on gold. The Federal Reserve system reports an addition of $25,000,000 to the monetary gold stock, the net result of changes incidental to the cessation of gold sterlization as of the first of the year. No gold imports were received this week and gold held under earmark for foreign account decreased $1,283,000.

Speculative markets, mostly commodities, so far are proving to be the most sensitive to the avowed intention of President Roosevelt, by hook or crook, to lift commodity prices. Granted that the bulge in prices taking place this week is purely a gamble that the economic managers will succeed in putting up the price level, a secondary effect is being felt in business. Producers and manufacturers are inclined to hold off price cuts already decided upon, to see which way the frog will jump.

Overnight the United States Steel Corporation announced that it would hold unchanged for second quarter the prices on steel products, except for the reduction in cold rolled sheets made last week. That settles a question that has added to the prevailing uncertainty in recent weeks, but doesn't project business confidence far in advance. Most likely steel consumers will be less reluctant now to make plans, but they are not expected to depart far from their practice of ordering on a hand-to-mouth basis.

Old Songs Are Best.

President Roosevelt said today that the new gold policy of pouring credit into the overflowing reservoir, the addition of a half a billion or more to "relief" appropriations, the hundreds of millions which it is hoped will be "borrowed" from the Treasury under the new housing program, and the new price-lifting farm bill, which also contemplates the yearly outlay of half a billion to a billion dollars, will not bring on inflation and do not mean that the Government intends to devalue the dollar. Just the same a few hypersensitive persons may be pardoned for feeling just a wee bit anxious.

Yes and No—

Asked whether he still thought commodity prices ought to be brought to the 1926 level, President Roosevelt told newspaper reporters today that the answer was "yes and no." That's the best answer that possibly can be given now to any question that might be asked of President Roosevelt on economic and monetary matters. For that reason we are likely to have yes and no business and yes and no markets for a long, long time.

Railroad Earnings.

Railroad earnings in January, on the basis of early reports, fell below a year ago. According to the Sun's estimate, the first five carriers showed net operating income 71.6 per cent below January, 1937. On Wednesday the Railroad Association reported that gross revenues of the first ninety-one roads were 16.4 per cent lower than last year. Carloadings in February have been and will be under last year. A good portion of these poorer traffic figures will be shown in the earnings statements for this month.

Local Banks Ready to Make Repair Loans

Improvement Funds Available Now Under Amended Housing Act.

Thomas J. Groom, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, announced yesterday that the new regulations of the Federal Housing Administration for making property improvement loans under Title I of the national housing act as amended had been received and that the banks of Washington were now ready and willing to make loans for the repair and modernization of real estate.

A special meeting of the District of Columbia Bankers Association was held Wednesday to approve a plan of advertising for these loans and informing the public of the important features of the national housing act.

According to Mr. Groom, under the old act which expired March 31, 1937, lending institutions of the country reported a total of 1,450,860 individual improvement loans amounting to $560,503,240, and that this played a major part in the general economic recovery of the country. He said that the banks of Washington had participated in these loans to the extent of 10,615 amounting to $5,384,659, and that this had contributed in a large measure to the improved business conditions in Washington.

Provision is made for repayment of the loans over a period of years and as the plan is part of the Administration's recovery program, Mr. Groom said that the banks of Washington desired to lend their full cooperation in this respect.

Oils and Utilities Resistant on Curb

Cotton Lower After Advance

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Cotton eased sharply from early advances today under active realizing and liquidation. May sold off from 9.18 to 8.95 and closed at 8.98, with final prices 6 to 13 points net lower.

Opening advances were run up to net gains of 11 to 14 points, aided by recent inflationary sentiment and proclamation of national cotton acreage for 1938 of 26,384,418 acres against 34,383,000 last year. The market ruled about steady in the afternoon, but renewed liquidation developed toward the close.

All districts reported decreases compared with the corresponding weeks in 1937 and 1930.

Soviet Loses Suit Against New York Bank

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook dismissed today the suit brought by the U. S. S. R. to collect $1,000,000 from the National City Bank of New York. This sum was deposited in the bank in 1918 by an agent of the Russian Socialist Federated Republic, one of the constituent states of the Soviet Union, in connection with a motion picture enterprise. The Soviet government contended the bank and the agent made unauthorized expenditure and brought action to collect the entire amount.

Justice McCook ruled that the 1933 recognition agreement barred the Soviet government from the right to bring action to recover the deposit, inasmuch as the pact released all claims the Russian government had against American nationals and assigned those claims to the United States Government for future adjudication.

New Financing Falls To Lowest in Years

New York, Feb. 18 (AP).—New financing for the week was the lowest in several years, amounting to only $1,301,000, compared with $46,361,275 the previous week and $34,089,808 the corresponding week a year ago, a compilation by Poor's Publishing Co. showed today.

In the week's total were 7 municipal issues totaling $1,151,000 and one industrial issue of $150,000.

Gold and Silver Imports.

The Commerce Department said yesterday that gold imports in the week ended February 11 totaled $3,131,555, of which $2,102,318 came from Colombia.

Silver imports amounted to $1,877,330, of which nearly all came from Mexico.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 18.—Stock market trading was more active today with recoveries in most sections of the industrial list. Home rails advanced, following the dividend announcement for Northeastern Railroad, higher than anticipated. Steels and tobaccos were in good demand and the oil group recovered early losses despite a cut in the price in gasoline. Coppers were firm, following high base metal prices, while tin and rubber shares were quiet. Transatlantic securities in some cases moved up as much as 2 points.

Paris.—Banking and international securities were in better demand and prices generally closed higher. Royal Dutch moved up 100 francs and Bank of France issue gained 35. Industrials were also firmer with net gains running from 10 to 25 francs. Rentes finished 15 centimes up to 35 lower.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures sold off on larger weekly Argentine exports and further moisture in the American Southwest belt. Closing prices were down ¼d to ¼d. Cotton futures gained 8 to 9 points on active general buying. Short covering and trade buying more than offset the Bombay realizing.

Guild to Hear Robert Jackson And La Follette

Will Speak at Banquet of Lawyers; to Open Convention Today.

The second annual convention of the National Lawyers Guild will convene at the Willard Hotel today at 2:30 p. m. for daily sessions through Tuesday.

Robert H. Jackson, nominated for solicitor-general, and Senator La-Follette, will speak at the annual banquet tomorrow for which Thurman W. Arnold, Yale University, will be toastmaster. President of the guild, John P. Devaney, former Chief Justice of the Minnesota Supreme Court, also will speak.

A series of roundtable conferences will open tomorrow afternoon. Among the speakers will be Senator Brookhart, Calvert Magruder, vice-dean of law, Harvard University, Carl L. Wheat, Federal Communications Commission; Thomas H. Eliot, general counsel, Social Security Board, and David Cushman Coyle.

Representative Maury Maverick will highlight Monday's program with an address on "Government and Business or Business and Government."

Townsend Return To D. C. Doubted

Reports that Dr. Francis Townsend, old-age pension leader, was en route here from California to begin serving his sentence of 30 days and a $100 fine for contempt of the House of Representatives, were doubted by court attaches here yesterday.

In the District Court no mandate compelling imposition of the sentence has been received; in the United States Court of Appeals, which recently affirmed the conviction, records show the mandate has been stayed indefinitely because an appeal to the United States Supreme Court has been announced.

Bob Burns Says—

In the old days politicians use'ta pull the wool over people's eyes and some of 'em got away with it for years but today the public is gettin' smart and can detect insincerity.

The other night a politician got up in a church out here and made a speech on temperance. He got along just fine until he warmed up in his speech denouncin' beer and he forgot himself and tried to blow the foam off a glass of water.

Leaders Warn Time Unripe to Cut War Debts

Roosevelt Advised Against Accepting Proposal to Settle With Hungary.

By the Associated Press.

Congressional leaders have advised President Roosevelt against accepting a proposal by Hungary for settlement of its debt to the United States, well-informed persons said yesterday.

Leaders consulted at the White House Thursday were said to have told the President Congress was in no frame of mind to consider debt reductions and that the matter had best be held in abeyance for a time, at least.

Conferees Keep Silence.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), of Mississippi, and Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairmen of the Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees, respectively, maintaine tight-lipped silence about the White House meeting, which they attended. So did Vice President Garner, Secretary of State Hull and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, who also were present.

President Roosevelt confirmed at his press conference that international debts had been discussed. He said the question was advanced no farther than it was two years ago, however.

Senator Borah (Republican), Idaho, commented that Congress "certainly is not going to enter into a compromise of these debts."

The principal amount of Hungary's debt, which was incurred to rehabilitate the country after the World War, is $1,939,000, to be paid over 62 years.

Hungary made a $9,828 debt payment last December.

Reliable persons said Hungary wants first to liquidate the accumulation of unmade payments since the Hoover moratorium of 1932. These amount to $65,000 principal, $317,628 interest and $33,804 annuity under the moratorium agreement, a total of $416,432.

The payment due last December was $51,240.

Senators Comment.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, an administration supporter, said he saw "no value in any further agreements fixing the amounts to be paid."

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, said he was against any "consideration of debt settlements of an orthodox nature calling for the scale-down of debts. I think past experience has proved that would be futile."

Senator Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, declared he didn't know of "any reason that appeals in law or morals why we should forgive the war debts."

On the other hand, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, said he hoped the war debts could be "closed up in some way."

The Hungarian legation said last night Hungary had advanced proposals for a debt settlement. These proposals, it said, were in the nature of suggestions.

Rev. Latch Speaks At Annual Dinner

The Rev. E. G. Latch, pastor of the Chevy Chase Episcopal Church, spoke before 125 fathers and sons last night at the annual Y. M. C. A. banquet at Western Presbyterian Church, 1906 H street northwest.

Donald Preston, of Cheverly, Md., was named winner of a prize in an essay contest for fathers. He wrote on "What I Expect From My Son." Barber C. Palmer, 11, of Silver Spring, Md., won the boys' contest with an essay titled "Why I Like My Dad." Both winners were given unlimited Y. M. C. A. memberships.

William R. Schumucker led singing. Other entertainment was provided by Carl Brockway, who gave a magic program and by Charlton Meyer, vocal soloist.

Japanese Name New General to Speed Victory

Matsui Recalled as China Claims Steady Gains on Rail Corridor.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 19.—Dismayed because of the failure of his armies to advance in their campaign to occupy China's provisional capital in Hankow, Emperor Hirohito of Japan today named a new supreme commander for the Yangtze Valley area and ordered the mobilization of more than 100,000 additional reservists.

Lieut. Gen. Iwane Matsui, in charge of Japanese forces in the Yangtze area since the start of the campaign there, was recalled to be replaced by one of the three ranking senior generals of the army—Shunroku Hata, former commander of the Formosan army and head of the inspectorate general of military education.

Imperial headquarters, Japan's super-government for the war, announced last night that large reinforcements will be sent to China at once to support the army's lengthening lines of communications as it drives farther inland.

It was reported that Gen. Matsui had asked for four divisions and that this number would be increased to 100,000 men or more as huge forces will be needed to conquer the Hankow area.

Hankow, China, Feb. 18 (AP).—China appears to be turning the tide, military observers declared tonight, in the great campaign in Central China on which may depend the outcome of her resistance against Japan.

China's forces, especially her air corps, seem at last to have found their stride, these sources said. Not only have the Chinese regained their shattered morale, they said, but also have adopted aggressive tactics.

While Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's regular troops have scored a number of notable successes during the past week, foreign observers reported a new People's Volunteers Corps and roving guerrilla units have become a formidable arm of China's defenses.

China's air force, strengthened by the "Foreign Legion" which includes many American and other foreign volunteer pilots, has become an important factor in the war.

Today over this temporary capital of China the Chinese air force scored its most spectacular triumph of the war, shooting down five raiding Japanese planes in flames on the outskirts of the city.

Fast Soviet-made planes, some believed flown by Americans, powerdived to smash the Japanese formations. The raiders totaled 30; a like number of Chinese planes rose to meet them.

Chinese army headquarters reported 3,000 out of 10,000 Japanese troops which had crossed to the north bank of the Hwai River in Anhwei Province had been annihilated and the rest had retreated to the south shore.

Daniel Reid Topping 2d, 18-day-old son of Arline Judge, film actress, and Dan Topping, New York sportsman, made his camera debut yesterday in the arms of his mother as his half brother, Charles Wesley Ruggles, jr., 5, looked on. Charles is the son of Director Ruggles, Miss Judge's former husband.

On Capitol Hill

Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan Men Oppose Lake Michigan Diversion Bill.

Delegates from Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan appeared yesterday before the House Rivers and Harbors Committee to oppose the Parsons bill for diversion of 5,000 cubic feet of water per second from Lake Michigan to increase navigability of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf waterway.

Attorney General Orlando S. Loomis, of Wisconsin, led protestants. Other opponents of the bill included William George Bruce, chairman of the Wisconsin Deep Waterway Commission; Mayor John Farrell, of Green Bay, Wis.; John Cox, port commissioner of Benton Harbor, Mich., and T. W. Wash, of St. Paul, Minn., who represented Gov. Elmer Benson, of that State.

* * * *

One of the pens President Roosevelt used to sign the farm bill was presented yesterday to Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, a ranking member of the House Agriculture Committee and one of the farm bill conferees.

Senator Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi, said the President had promised to give him one of the pens used in signing the bill. He said he would cherish it as a souvenir because the new law provides for establishment of a cotton research laboratory which the Senator termed "the realization of his dream."

* * * *

President Roosevelt and Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, had a brief meeting yesterday. The Senator said later they discussed the new crop control law, pending Government reorganization and "fishing." Ellender said he promised "all my support" on Administration legislation.

* * * *

Establishment in Tennessee of one of four regional laboratories provided for in the new farm law will be sought by Senator Kenneth D. McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee. Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, wants one for that State, also.

* * * *

A program to improve national defense facilities at the mouth of the Columbia River is looked upon favorably by President Roosevelt. Senator Albert E. Reames (Democrat), Oregon, said yesterday after a talk with Mr. Roosevelt. Reames said he would press for such legislation as soon as possible.

* * * *

Representative Gambrill (Democrat), Maryland, announced yesterday he would seek re-election from the Fifth District of that State. He has served in Congress since 1924.

Joseph I. Dawson Dies at Home Here

Joseph I. Dawson, 49, died last night at his home, 4432 Volta place northwest. He was assistant chief of the retail price division, bureau of labor statistics of the Labor Department.

Dawson was born October 22, 1888, in St. Mary's County, Md., and was educated at St. John's Academy, Annapolis, and Maryland Agricultural College. After his graduation he was employed by the Washington Evening Star and the old Washington Herald.

On the out break of the World War he entered the Air Service and was stationed with the flying school detachment at Gerstner Field, Lake Charles, La. He came to Washington after his discharge at the end of the war.

Dawson had been employed by the Labor Department since 1919, for a time as traveling inspector. He was a member of the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Funeral services and burial will be Monday at Middletown, N. Y.
